EDITORS' PREFACE

THE object of this series of translations is primarily to furnish students with short, cheap, and handy text-books, which, it is hoped, will facilitate the study of the particular texts in class under competent teachers. But it is also hoped that the volumes will be acceptable to the general reader who may be interested in the subjects with which they deal. It has been thought advisable, as a general rule, to restrict the notes and comments to a small compass; more especially as, in most cases, excellent works of a more elaborate character are available. Indeed, it is much to be desired that these translations may have the effect of inducing readers to study the larger works.

Our principal aim, in a word, is to make some difficult texts, important for the study of Christian origins, more generally accessible in faithful and scholarly translations.

In most cases these texts are not available in a cheap and handy form. In one or two cases texts have been included of books which are available in the official Apocrypha; but in every such case reasons exist for putting forth these texts in a new translation, with an Introduction, in this series.

* * * * *

An edition of The Apocalypse of Abraham is included in the present volume. The explanatory notes, in this case, given in the commentary on the text, are rather longer and fuller than usual. This was rendered necessary by the fact that the Book is made accessible here to English readers for the first time; and the difficulties and obscurities in the text are not inconsiderable.

INTRODUCTION

SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE BOOK

The Apocalypse of Abraham, which has been preserved in old Slavonic literature, falls into two distinct parts (cf. the somewhat similar case of The Ascension of Isaiah). The first part, contained in chaps. i.-viii., consists of a Midrashic narrative based upon the legend of Abraham's conversion from idolatry, which has several peculiar features.¹ The second part (chaps. ix.-xxxii.) is purely apocalyptic in character, and contains a revelation made to Abraham about the future of his race, after his (temporary) ascent into the heavenly regions, under the guidance of the archangel Jael, who here seems to play the part of Metatron-Michael. It is based upon the account of Abraham's trance-vision described in Genesis xv.—a favourite theme for apocalyptic speculation. In the Book, as it lies before us, the two parts are organically connected. Thus in chap. x. the archangel says: I am the one who was commissioned to set on fire thy father's house together with him, because he displayed reverence for dead (idols)—an allusion to the narrative of chap. viii.; and the general plan of the whole work seems to be based upon the idea that Abraham's dissatisfaction with the idol-worship by which he was surrounded, which found vent in his strong protest to his father Terah (chaps. i.-viii.), appealed so much to the divine favour, that the archangel Jael was specially sent by God to instruct him and initiate him into the knowledge of heavenly mysteries. Whether the apocalyptic portion ever existed in a shorter and independent form will be discussed below.

The Book opens with a description of Abraham's activities as a maker and seller of idols, his father Terah being a manufacturer of idols. His doubts as to the justifiable character of the idol-worship are roused especially by an accident that befell the stone image called Merumath, and by a similar accident that happened to "five other gods," by which they were broken in pieces (chaps. i.-ii.). Reflecting on this, he is led to protest to his father against the unreality of asking a blessing from such helpless images, thereby rousing Terah's anger (chaps. iii.-iv.). He is led to test further the powers of the idols by placing a wooden god Barisat before the fire, and telling the idol to see that the fire must not be allowed to die down during his absence. On returning he finds Barisat fallen backwards and "horribly burnt" (chap. v.). He again protests to his father against the futility of such worship, sarcastically contrasting the relative merits of gold, silver and wooden idols (chap. vi.). He then proceeds to show that the elements of fire, water, earth, and the heavenly bodies (sun, moon, and stars) are more worthy of honour than the idols, and yet, as each is subjected to some superior force, they can none of them claim to be God (chap. vii.). While he was yet speaking to his father a voice came from heaven bidding him leave his father's house. He had scarcely left the house when fire descended and consumed all within it.

The apocalyptic part opens with a divine command to Abraham to prepare a sacrifice with a view to receiving a divine revelation concerning the future (chap. ix.). Abraham, terrified at the experience, is confronted by the angel Jaoel, who encourages him, and explains his commission to be with Abraham, and act as his celestial guide. Under the direction of the angel he proceeds to Horeb, the Mount of God, a journey of forty days (chaps. x.-xii.), and there, with the help of Jaoel, accomplishes the sacrifice. At this point Azazel, the fallen archangel and seducer of mankind, intervenes and attempts to dissuade Abraham from his purpose. In the form of an unclean bird he flies down "upon the carcasses" (cf. Gen. xv. II), and tries to induce Abraham to leave the holy place, but in vain. Jaoel denounces the evil spirit, bidding him depart, and telling him that the heavenly garment which was formerly his has been set aside for Abraham (chaps. xiii.-xiv.).

After this Abraham and the angel ascend on the wings of the unslaughtered birds (of the sacrifice) to heaven, which is described at length. It is filled with "a strong light" of power inexpressible, and there they see the angels who are born and disappear daily, after singing their hymn of praise (chaps. xv.-xvi.). At this point Abraham, hearing the divine voice, falls prostrate, and, taught by the angel, utters the celestial song of praise, and prays for enlightenment (chap. xvii.). He sees the divine throne with the Cherubim and the holy Creatures (hayyoth), of whom a description is given, and particularly of their rivalry which is mitigated by the activity of Jaoel (chap. xviii.). God now speaks and discloses to Abraham the powers of heaven in the various firmaments below (chap. xix.). God promises him a seed numerous as the stars (chap. xx.). In answer to a question by Abraham about Azazel, God shows him a vision of the world, its fruits and creatures, the sea and its monsters (including Leviathan), the Garden of Eden, its fruits, streams, and blessedness. He sees also a multitude of human beings "half of them on the right side of the picture, and half of them on the left" (chap. xxi.). The fall of man is explained to him, being traced to the sin of Adam and Eve in the Garden, a vision of which appears in the picture and also of its results upon the destinies of mankind, who are divided into the people on the right side of the picture, representing the Jewish world, and the people on the left representing the heathen world. In particular the sin of idolatry resulting in impurity and murder is sketched and made manifest (chaps. xxii.-xxv.). The question, why sin is permitted, is answered by God (chap. xxvi.), and this is followed by a vision of judgement in which the destruction of the Temple is portrayed. In answer to Abraham's anguished question it is explained to him that this is due to the sin of idolatry on the part of his seed. At the same time a hint is given him of coming salvation (chap. xxvii.). In answer to the question, how long shall the judgement last? a description is given of the troubles preceding the Messianic Age, and the dawn of the latter (chaps. xxviii.-xxix.; the latter chapter contains a long Christian interpolation). At this point Abraham finds himself "upon the earth," but receives a further disclosure regarding the punishment of the heathen and the ingathering of Israel (chaps. xxx.-xxxi.). A short paragraph repeating the promise of the chosen people's deliverance from oppression closes the Book (chap. xxxii.).

The character of the Book, as a whole, is thoroughly Jewish. Its original language was probably Hebrew or Aramaic, from which a Greek version (underlying the Slavonic) was made; and the date of the original composition may be placed at the end of the first or the beginning of the second century A.D.

THE SLAVONIC TEXT AND MSS¹

The Slavonic version, or rather translation, of The Apocalypse of Abraham (Ap. Abr.) has been preserved in a number of MSS. The oldest and most valuable of these is the famous Codex Sylvester,² which now belongs to the Library of the Printing-department of the Holy Synod in Moscow. The MS., which dates from the first half of the fourteenth century, is written on parchment, with two columns on each page, and contains 216 leaves in all, our Apocalypse occupying leaves 164-182.³ It contains a collection of lives of different saints, and The Apocalypse of Abraham stands in it as a work complete in itself, without any connexion with the works which precede and follow it.

The text of our Apocalypse according to Codex Sylvester (cited as S) has been edited by Professor N. Tikhonravov in his Memorials of Russian Apocryphal Literature (Pamyatniki otrechennoi russkoi literatury), Moscow, 1863, Vol. I. pp. 32-53; and also Professor J. Sreznevsky in his Ancient Monuments of Russian Writing and Language (Drevnie Pam'yatniki russkovo pis'ma i yazyka), Petrograd, 1863, I. pp. 247^b-256^a, with readings from the Uvaroff MS., which apparently is a mere copy of S. Tikhonravov has supplied his edition with corrections of the numerous clerical mistakes which abound in S, thereby earning the gratitude of students, while Sreznevsky has satisfied himself with producing a mere copy of the text, with all its mistakes. Apart from these editions there has also been published by the Imperial Society of Bibliophiles a facsimile edition of the text of our Apocalypse, according to S (Petrograd, 1890), thus affording students the means of consulting the MS. itself. Apart from S the text of Ap. Abr. is also contained in many Palæas.⁴ The Palæa, as its name indicates (ἡ παλαιά sc. διαθήκη), deals with the Old Testament, especially with the historical part of it, beginning with creation and ending with David or Solomon, the biblical narratives being enlarged and embellished with apocryphal and pseudepigraphical matter. The origin of the Slavonic Palæa must be sought in some Greek prototype,⁵ which by way of Bulgaria and Serbia had, at an early date, found an entrance into Russia, where for centuries it enjoyed great popularity—at least so long as a translation of the whole Bible had not been made accessible to both clergy and people, that is up till the sixteenth century.

³ A full description of S is given by Sreznevsky, op. cit., pp. i-viii.

⁴ On the subject of the Palæa see the works of N. S. Tikhonravov (Sochinenia), Moscow, 1898, Vol. I. pp. 156-170, and the valuable notes at the end of the volume; cf. also the article Palæa in the Russian Encyclopædia published by Brockhaus—Efron.

⁵ A MS. of a Greek Palæa is known to exist in the Vienna Library, and has been edited by A. V. Vasil'eff in Anecdota græco-byzantina, I. pp. 188-192 (Moscow, 1892).

There are two kinds of Palæas, the historical and the expository, the former being also known as the “eyes” of the Palæa, because it contains the text upon which the expository Palæa comments. The expositions are of a polemical character, the polemic being invariably directed against the Jews (Zhidovin), to whom it is demonstrated that all the prophecies and the manifold types had found their true fulfilment in Christ. The Palæa draws richly upon the Jewish Midrashic Literature, and then uses the material as an argument against the Jews from whom it was borrowed.

Originally our Apocalypse had no place in the Palæa, as may be seen from the oldest Palæa MS., which dates from the fourteenth century, and is preserved in the Alexander-Nevsky Monastery (Petrograd). Later, it was inserted, but still retained its original character of an independent work (as is the case in the Uvaroff Palæ); but later still (from the sixteenth century and onwards) the text of Ap. Abr. loses its original character of an independent work, the material being worked into the life of Abraham. The title of the Book is dropped, and the first person in which Abraham speaks in S is altered into the third, that is, it is changed into a narrative about Abraham, though the scribe often forgets himself and retains the first person of the original.

The apocryphal and pseudepigraphical writings must have been introduced into Russia at a very early date. Large parties of devout Russians, conducted by some learned monk, made frequent pilgrimages to Constantinople and the Holy Land. It was on such pilgrimages that the people were, for the first time, made acquainted with these writings, and the learned monk would, on the spot, translate the book, which had enriched his knowledge concerning the Patriarchs or the Apostles, into Slavonic, and then bring it back, as a most precious treasure to his own country, to the great delight of his fellow-monks in the monastery. It may, therefore, be taken for granted that the Greek original of our Apocalypse had never been brought to Russia, and that there never existed more than one translation of it into Slavonic, for S and the Palæa do not represent different translations, but only different types or recensions of one and the same version. The differences between the Palæa and S are very slight, the former only modernising here and there the style and the orthography. The Palæa is, therefore, of great value for the reconstruction of the original text, especially as it has preserved, in many cases, a more correct copy than is the case with S. The Palæa version is, however, disfigured by the many interpolations made by subsequent scribes which are all absent from S, and which are easily discernible as being interpolations.¹

The Palæa version of our Apocalypse has been edited by Tikhonravov² from a MS. which once belonged to the Joseph-Monastery in Volokolamsk, whence it has been transferred to the Library of the Moscow Academy of Divinity,³ the MS. dating from the fifteenth century. Then I. Porfir'ev edited it in his Apocryphal Narratives about Old Testament Persons and Events (Apokrificheskia skazania o vetkhozavetnykh litsakh i sobytiakh), Petrograd, 1877, pp. 111-130,¹ from a MS. dating from the seventeenth century, originally the property of the Library of the Solovetzki-Monastery, whence it was transferred to the Library of the Kasan Academy of Divinity.² A and K are closely related to each other, and represent a type of text common to them both. Thus the same mistakes are found in both, and also the same additional matter, not extant in S.³

Another Palæa-text, containing part of the text of our Apocalypse, viz. the legendary narrative in chaps. i.-viii. only, has been edited by A. Pypin in Pseudepigrapha and Apocrypha of Russian Antiquity (Ložnyja i otrečennyja knigi russkoi stariny) in the third volume of Kuselev-Bezborodko, Memorials of Old Russian Literature (Pam'yatniki starinnoj russkoi literatury), Petrograd, 1882, pp. 24-26. This is from the Palæa of the Rumjancov Museum, dating from the year 1494.⁴

In S the end of the Book is missing, but is, fortunately, extant both in A and K. K also has at the end a short paragraph not found in A, which forms an appropriate conclusion to the whole Book. The reader will find it given in the notes on the concluding passage. See further Appendixes II. and III.⁵

DATE OF COMPOSITION AND ORIGINAL LANGUAGE OF THE BOOK

The Slavonic text, it is obvious, was made from a Greek version which, no doubt, was current in Constantinople. It is probable, however, that the Greek text underlying the Slavonic was itself a translation of a Semitic original. A number of indications suggest this. The simple co-ordination of the sentences, the naïve repetitions, and the frequency of the phrase "Here am I" (= Hebrew hinnēni), which characterise all parts of the Book, point in this direction. Then, too, the sarcastic names given to the idols in the first part (chaps. i.-viii.)—the stone idol Merumath (= 'eben Mērūmā, "stone of deceit"), the wooden idol Barisat (= bar 'ishtā "son of the fire," Aramaic)—presuppose a knowledge of Hebrew or Aramaic, or both, on the part of the original readers which would hardly be likely in a purely Greek composition. The fact, too, that Abraham is supposed to be the speaker throughout may lend some weight to the argument for a Hebrew original. The cumulative effect of these considerations taken in conjunction with the intensely Jewish character of the Book as a whole makes a Semitic original highly probable. Perhaps the Book was composed in Hebrew, with a slight admixture of Aramaic, such as occurs in the early Palestinian Midrashim.

The date of the composition of the Book can be determined, within narrow limits, with some probability. Clearly the terminus a quo is the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem in 70 A.D. which is bewailed by Abraham in the apocalyptic part of the Book. The fact, too, that it forms the central point of the picture, that the revelation leads up to it as a sort of climax, and that the apocalyptist is so deeply moved at the disclosure, suggests that the event is fairly recent. Ginzberg (J.E., i. 92) thinks "the last decades of the first century" are probably the period to which the composition of the Book should be assigned, at any rate in its earliest form. In any case the terminus ad quem can hardly be later than the first decades of the second century. The fact that the Book won acceptance in Christian circles, and was adapted by slight interpolation to Christian purposes—though its intensely Jewish character is manifest on every page—strongly supports the early date. Such a Book would have appealed to Jewish-Christians in Palestine, when Jewish-Christianity was still in close touch with a non-Christian Jewish community in the Holy Land—and it may be assumed, in view of the Semitic character of its original language, that the Book was of Palestinian origin. It must, therefore, have been produced at a time when early apocalyptic literature was still being written in Hebrew or Aramaic, i. e. not later than the early decades of the second century.¹

The question as to the existence of the Book at first in a shorter and much simpler form is discussed below.

EARLY ATTESTATION OF THE BOOK

That the Book must have enjoyed some considerable vogue and popularity in certain Christian circles is proved by its survival, in more than one form, in old Slavonic literature. And this must be equally true of the Greek form of the Book from which the Slavonic was derived. There is, as we should expect, some early evidence of the Book's existence, though some of it is vague and uncertain. What seems to be the clearest and most explicit piece of evidence of this kind is found in the Clementine Recognitions, I. 32, which carries us back to at least the early part of the fourth century, and which, not improbably, through the sources of the Clementine Literature, may go back to an earlier period, still, perhaps another century.² The section in the Recognitions deals with Abraham, and the part which specially concerns us runs as follows:

From the first this same man [Abraham], being an astrologer, was able, from the account and order of the stars, to recognise the Creator, while all others were in error, and understood that all things are regulated by His providence. Whence also an angel, standing by him in a vision, instructed him more fully concerning those things which he was beginning to perceive. He shewed him also what belonged to his race and posterity, and promised them that those districts should be restored rather than given to them.

Here the first sentence clearly refers to some form of the legend of Abraham's conversion from idolatry; but it agrees rather with Philo's account in de Abrahamo, § 15 (see Appendix I.) than with that embodied in the first part of our Book, which depicts Abraham in his early days as a maker and seller of idols rather than as an astrologer. But the second sentence forms a good description of the second or apocalyptic part of our Book, and may be taken as a reference to it. That in fact a book known as "the Apocalypse of Abraham" existed in his time is explicitly stated by Epiphanius (Hær. xxxix. 5) where, in speaking of the Gnostic sect called

“the Sethians,” he says they possessed a number of books “written in the name of great men,” seven in the name of Seth, and among others one “in the name of Abraham which they also declare to be an apocalypse,” and which is “full of all wickedness” (πάσης κακίας ἔμπλεων). Schürer thinks that this heretical book cannot be identified with our Apocalypse. Dr. M. R. James, however,¹ is inclined to believe “that Epiphanius on his authority is here going too far, and is fathering on the Sethians a book, which they may well have used, but which they did not manufacture.” It is quite possible, and not improbable that this Gnostic sect made use of our Book in an interpolated form. As we shall see, there are Gnostic features in it in the form in which it has reached us, and Ginzberg is inclined to regard these as interpolations from a Gnostic book bearing the same name. A heretical Book (or Apocalypse) of Abraham may also possibly be referred to in a passage in the Apostolic Constitutions, vi. 16 (compiled in its present form probably in the second half of the fourth century), which runs as follows:

And among the Ancients also some have written apocryphal books of Moses, and Enoch, and Adam, and Isaiah, and David, and Elijah, and of the three patriarchs, pernicious and repugnant to the truth (φθοροποιὰ καὶ τῆς ἀληθείας ἐχθρά).

It will be noticed that this is a list of Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, most of the items of which are easily recognisable. By “the three patriarchs” can only be meant Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Thus the passage attests the existence, at the time when the compiler wrote, of an apocryphal Book of Abraham, which may well be identical with our Apocalypse.² Lastly there is the evidence of the lists of books (containing the bare names) included in the Synopsis of Pseudo-Athanasius (compiled probably about 500 A.D.) and the Stichometry of Nicephorus (drawn up in Jerusalem perhaps about 850 A.D.). The latter is identical with the former, except that it attaches to the name of each book the number of stichoi or lines contained in it. The first six names on these lists are as follows: (1) Enoch; (2) Patriarchs; (3) Prayer of Joseph; (4) Testament of Moses; (5) Assumption of Moses; (6) Abraham. The second list adds to the sixth name “stichometry 300,” thus giving us “a book [of Abraham] rather shorter than the Greek Esther, which has 350 στίχοι.” Dr. M. R. James³ is of opinion that the word ἀποκάλυψις is to be supplied before Ἀβραάμ here, and this view we may safely accept. We have thus another piece of evidence of the existence of a Book called “the Apocalypse of Abraham,” which was of sufficient importance to be included in a list of books of Old Testament apocrypha containing such well-known names as the Book of Enoch, the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, and the Assumption of Moses.

From a survey of this evidence it may be concluded that an apocryphal book (or books) under the name of Abraham was current in the early Christian centuries: and that our Apocalypse is one product or form of this literature. The so-called Testament of Abraham is, no doubt, another. The possibility remains to be considered that our Apocalypse may have assumed different forms (by enlargement or curtailment) and have been adapted at different times for different purposes.

³ Op. cit., p. 9. The synopsis embraces eleven items.

GNOSTIC ELEMENTS IN THE TEXT

Among the Gnostic features in the text of our Book may be reckoned the significant emphasis laid upon “right” and “left” in the apocalyptic representation (cf. xxii. (end), xxiii.), the “right” side being the source of purity and light, the “left” that of impurity and darkness. This idea is ancient,¹ depending upon the dualism which insists upon the category of light and darkness, and can be traced back to ancient Zoroastrianism. But it was developed in the early Gnostic systems (see Irenæus, adv. Hær. I., xi. 2: II. xxiv. 6), and in the Jewish Kabbalah, where “right side” and “left side” (sitrā yêmînā wě-sitrā ’ahārā) become technical terms. In the Emanistic system of the Zohar, the whole world is divided between “right” and “left,” where pure and impure powers respectively operate—on the right side the Holy One and His powers, on the left the serpent Sammael and his powers (cf. Zohar, Bereshith, 47b, 53f, 169b and following, 174b). When, therefore, we find our Book dividing mankind into two hosts, one on the right side (= the Jews) and one on the left (= the heathen), the presence of Gnostic influence seems clear. At the same time, it may well be an original feature of the Book, as the idea had already been assimilated by the ancient Jewish mystical tradition (Kabbalah), and if our Apocalypse was of Essene origin there would be nothing surprising in the presence of such an element.

The opposition between light and darkness seems also to be present in an obscure passage in chap. xiv., which is absent from S. It runs as follows (Azazel is being addressed):

For thy heritage is (to be) over those existing with thee being born with the stars and clouds, with the men whose portion thou art, and (who) through thy being exist; and thine enmity is justification.

Perhaps by those “being born with the stars and clouds” is meant those who by birth and creation belong to the sphere of night and darkness, as opposed to the righteous who belong to the sphere of light. This again accords with the ancient dualistic conception referred to above, and may very well be an original feature. The absence of the clause from S may be due to excision. It can hardly be an interpolation from Slavonic sources.

On the other hand, there are two passages where the original text may have been modified under Christian Gnostic influence (apart from the obvious interpolation indicated by italic type in chap. xxix.). In chap. xx. God, addressing Abraham, says: “As the number of the stars and their power, (so will) I make thy seed a nation, and a people set apart for me in my heritage with Azazel.” And again in chap. xxii.: “But those which are on the right side of the picture—they are the people set apart for me of the peoples with Azazel.” Here God is represented as sharing His heritage (= the Jewish people) with the evil spirit Azazel. “This,” says Ginzberg (J.E., i. 92), “is no doubt the Gnostic doctrine of the God of the Jews as kakodaimon,” i. e. that the God of the Old Testament is an inferior deity, whose work was fused with evil elements. Still, these Gnostic elements in our Book are not very pronounced; there are no clear and explicit allusions to any of the full-blown doctrines of the Ophites or kindred Gnostic sects. The phenomena suggest that the Book is an essentially Jewish one, which may have been used and read by Gnostic Christians, and adapted by slight revision to make it acceptable to such readers.

GENERAL CHARACTER OF THE BOOK AND INTEGRITY OF ITS TEXT

The Book is essentially Jewish, and there are features in it which suggest Essene origin; such are its strong predestinarian doctrine, its dualistic conceptions, and its ascetic tendencies. It may well have passed from Essene to Ebionite circles—the interpolation in chap. xxix. certainly looks like the work of a Jewish-Christian—and thence, in some form, have found its way into Gnostic circles.

Is the Book as it lies before us—apart from the interpolation in chap. xxix.—substantially in its original shape? To this question an affirmative answer may, with some probability, be given. Ginzberg, it is true, suggests a different view. He says (J.E., i. 92):

It is quite probable that certain parts of the heretical Apocalypse of Abraham, which was in circulation among the Gnostics (Epiphanius, xxxix. 5), were incorporated in the present text [of our Apocalypse]. Subtracting, then, the first part [i. e. chaps. i.-viii., containing the “Legend”], which does not belong to the Apocalypse, and the Gnostic and Christian interpolations, only about three hundred lines remain, and this number would exactly correspond with the number which, according to the stichometry of Nicephorus, the Apocalypse of Abraham contained.

There are considerable difficulties attaching to this theory. It is difficult to suppose that the Book in its original form was without the opening chapters (i.-viii.) narrating Abraham’s conversion from idolatry. There are several allusions in the later chapters to this opening narrative, which come in quite naturally. The chapters form a good introduction to what follows, and, as such, were probably put into their present shape by the original author of the Book. The material of the legend was, of course, much older; but it is to be noticed that our author has handled this material in a very free way, and this fact also suggests that these chapters were no mere addition to the Book, borrowed from one of the current forms of the legend. It seems more probable that the shorter “Apocalypse of Abraham” implied by the Stichometry of Nicephorus was a shortened recension of the original book, probably adapted for orthodox Christian purposes. It is by no means impossible that a shorter recension may have existed side by side with the fuller original form at a later date. The latter may have survived and have been read in certain circles by preference, and thence have passed over into the old Slavonic Church literature. Whether the heretical “Apocalypse of Abraham” referred to by Epiphanius which, according to him was “full of all wickedness” was another and independent recension, it is impossible to say. On the whole it seems more likely that the older form of the Book—especially if it had grown up in Ebionite (Jewish-Christian) circles—was the form in which it was read by the Sethian Gnostics. The mere fact that it was read in such circles would make it suspicious in the eyes of a later orthodoxy, which may have endeavoured to suppress it by issuing a shorter recension of the text. But the older form was too popular to be eliminated in this way entirely—though it has almost disappeared from Christian literature, and in its Greek and Semitic forms has, in fact, disappeared, only surviving in its old Slavonic dress.

That such a Jewish-Christian Book would have been acceptable to Sethian Gnostic readers is not surprising. This Gnostic sect held the doctrine that the Sophia “found means to preserve through every age, in the midst of the Demiurge’s world, a race bearing within them the spiritual seed which was related to her own nature” . . . they “regarded Cain as a representative of the Hylic; Abel, of the Psychical; and Seth, who was finally to reappear in the person of the Messiah, of the Pneumatic principle.”¹

The emphasis laid in our Book (chap. xxiv.) upon the lawlessness of Cain, “who acted lawlessly through the Adversary,” and its evil consequence in the slaughter of Abel would appeal to such Gnostic readers no less than the division of mankind into “right” and “left,” and the assignment of the latter to the dominion of the “lawless Adversary” Azazel. Abraham, too, the hero of the Book, was in the line of Seth, and it is from him that the Messiah springs (chap. xxix.). All this would be read by such Gnostic readers in the light of their own presuppositions.

We conclude, then, that the Book, substantially as it lies before us, is a Jewish and Essene production, like the related Testament of Abraham. It depicts the initiation of Abraham into the heavenly mysteries associated with the Divine “Chariot” (cf. Ezek. i.). Its angelology is in line with Essene speculation, and in chap. xvii. Abraham is taught by the archangel, in the form of the celestial hymn, the mystery of the Divine Name. We have reached the stage when Enoch has fallen into the background, and Abraham, like Moses, has become the centre of mystic lore, that is “when the seal of circumcision had become the pledge of life.”² It is noteworthy that the Kabbalistic book Sefer Yesîrâ (? second century A.D.) was attributed to Abraham.

It may occur to some readers as an objection to this view that the prominence assigned to Abraham’s sacrifice in the Book, and to the destruction of the Temple, regarded as the supreme calamity, is inconsistent with Essene authorship, since the Essenes rejected animal sacrifices. But, as Kohler has shewn,³ the Essenes, who accepted the Mosaic Law, were not opposed to such sacrifices on principle. What they opposed was the priesthood in the Temple “out of mistrust as to their state of holiness and purity, rather than out of aversion to sacrifice.” To Abraham, the Essene saint, acting under direct divine command, no such objection would apply.

It should be added that the Slavonic MSS. yield a text which is markedly shorter than the texts of the Palæan MSS. Some of the omitted passages are perhaps cases of deliberate excision, and others of accidental omission. But there remain a substantial number where the shorter text is probably original, and the presence of glosses or later amplifications is to be suspected. All such passages are indicated in the text of the translation given below.

THEOLOGY OF THE BOOK

The apocalyptic part of the Book is based upon the story of Abraham’s sacrifice and trance, as described in Gen. xv. This experience is interpreted to mean that Abraham received a divine disclosure as to the destinies of his descendants, which is also the view of the Rabbinical Midrash (cf. Bereshith rabba, xliv. 15 f.). This scheme provides the framework in which our apocalypse is set. Abraham, after completing the prescribed sacrifice, ascends to heaven, under the guidance of the angel, and from thence sees below him the drama of the world’s future, and also the various powers and forces that operate in the celestial sphere. In exactly the same way the Midrash (Bereshith rabba, xlv. 14) interprets Abraham's experience as an ascension. According to a saying of R. Jehuda, citing the authority of R. Johanan, God caused him [Abraham] to ascend above the vault of the firmament, and said to him: "Look now toward heaven": "looking" [here] means nought else but from [the height] above to [what is] below. This is a continuation of a comment on the sentence: And He brought him forth outside (Gen. xv. 5) interpreted to mean: "And He (God) brought him (Abraham) forth outside the world."

The angel who conducts Abraham on his celestial journey is the archangel Jaobel, who plays an all-important rôle. As is pointed out in the notes, he fulfils the functions elsewhere assigned to Michael and Metatron. Just as Metatron bears the tetragrammaton (cf. Ex. xxiii. 21, "My Name is in him"), so Jaobel here (chap. x.) is possessed of the power of the Ineffable Name. The name Jaobel itself is evidently a substitute for the tetragrammaton, which was too sacred to be written out in full. This angelic being is thus God's vicegerent, second only to God Himself. Yet he may not be worshipped, but rather himself sets Abraham the example of worshipping God. He is thus the supreme figure in Jewish angelology. Like Enoch, who was also transformed into Metatron, Jaobel acts as celestial guide. Jaobel is also the heavenly choir-master (chap. xii. "Singer of the Eternal"; cf. also chap. xvii.), a function assigned elsewhere to Michael; like Michael he is the guardian of the chosen race (chap. x., end), and is potent to subdue "the attack and menace of every single reptile" (ibid.).

It is this supreme angelic being who in one line of apocalyptic tradition becomes the heavenly Son of Man—a conception that exercised an important influence on Christological development.¹

Over against Jaobel stands Azazel, who here appears as the arch-fiend,² and as active upon the earth (chap. xiii.), though his real domain is in Hades, where he reigns as lord (chap. xxxi.). In fact, according to the peculiar representation of our Apocalypse, Azazel is himself the fire of Hell (cf. chap. xiv. "Be thou the burning coal of the furnace of the earth," and xxxi., "burnt with the fire of Azazel's tongue"). He is the source of all wickedness and uncleanness (chap. xiii.), and the godless are his heritage (ibid.). He is denounced as the slanderer of truth and the seducer of mankind, having "scattered over the earth the secrets of heaven," and "rebelled against the Mighty One" (chap. xiv.). The radical dualism of the Book comes out not only in the sharp division of mankind into two hosts, which stand for Jewry and heathendom respectively, but also in the clearly defined contradistinction of two ages, the present Age of ungodliness and the future Age of righteousness (cf. chap. xxix. and ix.). The present Age—called "this æon" (chap. xxxi)—is "corruptible" (chap. xvii.), "the Age of ungodliness" (chap. xxix., xxxii.), during which the heathen have the dominion over the Jews (chap. xxxi.); it is to last "twelve" years or "hours" (chap. xxix.). Over against it stands "the coming Age" (chap. xxxi.), or "Age of the righteous" (chap. xvii., xxix.). The origin of sin is traced to the Fall, which is described in chap. xxiii. The agent is, of course, the serpent, who is merely the instrument of Azazel. Indeed, the twelve wings of the latter are given in the description to the serpent. The evil spirit, who is described as being “between” the human pair in the Garden, “representeth ungodliness, their beginning (on the way) to perdition, even Azazel,” and the seer proceeds to ask why God has given “power to such to destroy the generation of men in their works upon the earth.” In some sense, then, according to the representation of our Apocalypse, the sin of Adam affects the destinies of all his descendants. The moral poison of sensuality (Heb. zôhāmā) with which the serpent infected Eve (T. B., Yēbāmôth, 103 b) passed on to all generations (cf. Wisdom ii. 24, 4 Ezra. iii. 21).¹ This has an important bearing on the Pauline doctrine of original sin. At the same time, our Apocalypse, in spite of its strong expression of predestinarian views elsewhere, insists with marked emphasis upon the freedom of man’s will (cf. chap. xxvi.).

² So in one form of the tradition in 1 Enoch, Azazel stands at the head of the fallen angels.

The Book apparently knows nothing of a resurrection. The righteous dead, it would seem, proceed straight to the heavenly Paradise (“the Garden of Eden”), where they enjoy heavenly “fruits and blessedness” (chap. xxi.), while the wicked dead go immediately to the underworld and Azazel. Nothing is said of an intermediate state. The more usual view is that the heavenly Paradise is reserved for the righteous dead, who will enter it after the final judgement (except for a few privileged saints like Enoch, who are allowed to enter it beforehand). The nearest parallel to the idea of our Book, seems to occur in 1 Enoch lx. 8, 23, lxi. 12, lxx. 4, where the elect righteous already dwell in the garden of life.

“A judgement” is spoken of “at the end of the world,” but it is a judgment upon the heathen nations effected by Israel at the end of the present age of ungodliness² (cf. chap. xxii., xxix.).

A detailed eschatological description of the end of the present age of ungodliness and the coming in of the age of righteousness is given in chap. xxix.-xxxi. In chap. xxix. it is stated that before the beginning of the new Age God’s judgement will be effected on the ruthless heathen nations by God’s people¹; ten plagues come upon all creatures of the earth on account of sin; those who are of Abraham’s seed survive according to a pre-determined number, hasten to Jerusalem, wreak vengeance on their foes, and rejoice before God, to whom they return (chap. xxix.). In the following chapter (xxx.) a detailed description is given of the ten plagues which visit the heathen “at the twelfth hour of the present Age.” Chap. xxxi. describes the trumpet-blast which announces the mission of God’s Elect One (the Messiah), who gathers together the dispersed of Israel, and the annihilation and horrible doom of the godless foes of Israel and of God’s enemies both within and without Israel (the former renegade Jews), and the joy which the downfall of these wicked people and the signal manifestation of God’s righteousness cause.

As has been pointed out above, our Apocalypse, like the companion one of The Ascension of Isaiah, and other examples in the apocalyptic literature, expresses the mystical tradition and experience associated with the mysteries of the Divine Chariot or Throne. The speculation which gave rise to this tradition starts from Ezekiel’s Chariot-Vision (Ezek. i.), and is embodied in a fairly extensive literature especially in i. and ii. Enoch in the earlier Apocalyptic, and in the neo-Hebraic "Hekalot" literature (eighth to tenth centuries A.D.). The material of which it is composed, and which is constantly re-shaped, consists mainly of descriptions of the seven heavens "with their hosts of angels, and the various store-houses of the world, and of the divine throne above the highest heaven."¹ Heaven is pictured as filled with light of inexpressible brilliance, and the Divine Chariot is surrounded by fiery angels of warlike aspect. The mystic who is allowed to enter the celestial sphere usually receives divine disclosures about the future or the spiritual world.

In order to enjoy this experience the mystic has to prepare himself to enter the ecstatic state which is brought about especially by ablutions and fasting, but also sometimes by fervent invocations and by other means. He is rewarded by "the vision of the Merkabah" or "Divine Chariot" (sěfiyyath hamerkābā). Those who thus imagined themselves entering the Heavenly Chariot and floating through the air were called Yōrēdē Merkābā, i. e. "those who go down (embark) into the ship-like chariot" (Jellinek). "In this chariot they are supposed to ascend to the heavens, where in the dazzling light surrounding them they behold the inner-most secrets of all persons and things otherwise impenetrable and invisible."² The heavenly charioteer is Metatron (according to Kohler suggested by Mithra), the angel next the Throne, whose name is like God's, and who possesses all knowledge, and imparts it to man. Metatron, as we have seen, is Enoch transformed. In our Book he seems to appear under the name Jaobel. It is interesting to note that according to the late Jewish "Hekalot" the initiated one who is admitted to the heavenly regions, in order to be allowed to step before the Divine Throne must recite certain prayers until God Himself addresses him, if he be worthy; cf. with this the Hymn-Prayer which Abraham is taught to recite in chap. xvii. of our Book. According to Kohler³ the Merkabah mysteries "remained the exclusive property of the initiated ones, the Senū'im or Hashshā'im," whom he identifies with the Essenes.

[The emphasis that is laid throughout all parts of the Book upon the sin of idolatry is noteworthy, and especially that the Temple-sacrifices had been polluted by idolatrous rites (cf. chap. xxiv.). Perhaps this is intended to suggest a reason why the sanctuary was destroyed.]

¹ The "judgement of the Great Assize" mentioned in chap. xxiv. occurs in a clause which is absent from S, and may be an interpolation.

It will be noticed that chaps. xxx. and xxxi. duplicate to some extent the contents of chap. xxix. They read like an appendix. Moreover, the figure of the Messiah first emerges here, and his rôle is a somewhat limited one. The last words of chap. xxix. ("And lo! I am with you for ever") may well have formed the conclusion of the Apocalypse.

It should be noted also that in the Christian addition in chap. xxix. no emphasis is laid upon Christ's divinity. The description reads like an Ebionitic one.

In this connexion it may be noted that the identification of the fruit of the forbidden tree in chap. xxiii. with the grape may reflect the ascetic tendency, which grew up in Jewish (and Jewish-Christian) circles after the destruction of Jerusalem, to abstain from wine as a mark of mourning. This feeling may have stimulated the view that wine was the source of woe to mankind (see note on passage). Apparently the Essenes regarded Jonadab, the founder of the sect of "water-drinkers" (Rechabites), as a prototype of the Essene order (see J.E., v. 230b).

² According to chapter xxii. these peoples are destined "some for judgement and restoration, and others for vengeance and destruction at the end of the world."

³ Cf. J.E., viii. 499b.

LITERARY AFFINITIES AND SPECIAL IMPORTANCE OF THE BOOK

Our Apocalypse has affinities, as has already been pointed out, with such books as The Ascension of Isaiah, which like it deals with the mysteries of the heavens¹ and is set in a similar mystical framework. But the latter work has a pronouncedly Christian element, and is a production of Jewish-Christian origin in its present form, whereas in our Book the Christian element is confined to a short interpolated passage in chap. xxix.

With the Testament of Abraham, there is a certain affinity, and this work, like our Apocalypse, may be of Essene origin. But the two books are quite distinct, and their historical setting is different. The Testament, though it contains an apocalyptic element in the parts which describe Abraham's "ride" through the heavenly regions when he sees the fate of departed souls, is based upon the idea of Abraham's death; moreover, the chief angelic figure in the Testament is Michael, and the eschatology is different. Possibly the eschatology of the two Books may be regarded as complementary, the Apocalypse giving the national, and the Testament the individual aspects of it from the Essene standpoint.

There is, too, a certain affinity with the Clementine literature (Homilies and Recognitions), which is highly important for the history of Gnostic Judæo-Christianity. Thus in the Clementine Homilies the doctrine of contrasts is much elaborated. The ruler of this world is Satan, the ruler of the future world is the Messiah. The divinity of Christ is not recognised, no stress is laid upon the doctrine of the atonement, and strict asceticism is enjoined.

Our Book is important as illustrating the Jewish ideas that lie behind the doctrine of original sin in connexion with the story of the Fall, and in its angelology and demonology. In the angelic figure of Jaël (= Michael = Metatron), God's vicegerent and the imparter of divine revelation to man (in the person of Abraham) we have one more illustration of the range of conceptions on the Jewish side which influenced the Logos-idea and Christological development. The pessimistic estimate of the world as it is—"the æon of ungodliness—which to a large extent is under the dominion of Azazel, illustrates such phrases as "the god of this world" (2 Cor. iv. 4), "the ruler of this world" (John xii. 31) which are applied to Satan. These probably reflect popular Jewish feeling. The earth is the Lord's, as St. Paul himself insists (1 Cor. x. 26), but has fallen under the dominion of the evil one, and can only be redeemed therefrom by God's Messiah.

Our Book is specially important as one more interesting example of the apocalyptic ideas of late Judaism, and, more particularly, as throwing a welcome light on the ideas specially congenial to early Jewish-Christianity when it had already become, to some extent, detached from the common stream of Church life.

THE APOCALYPSE OF ABRAHAM

PART I

THE LEGEND (Chapters I.-VIII)

Title¹

The Book of the Revelation of Abraham, the son of Terah, the son of Nahor, the son of Serug, the son of Roog (Reu²), the son of Arphaxad, the son of Shem, the son of Noah, the son of Lamech, the son of Methuselah, the son of Enoch, the son of Jared (Arad).

Abraham's Conversion from Idolatry (Chapters I.—VIII.).

I. On the day when I plained the gods of my father³ Terah and the gods of Nahor his brother,⁴ when I was searching as to who the Mighty God in truth is—I, Abraham, at the time when it fell to my lot, when I fulfilled the services (the sacrifices)⁵ of my father Terah to his gods of wood and stone, gold and silver, brass and iron,⁶ having entered into their temple for service, I found the god whose name was Merumath⁷ (which was) hewn out of stone, fallen forward at the feet of the iron god Nahon.⁸ And it came to pass, when I saw it, my heart was perplexed, and⁹ I considered in my mind that I should not be able to bring him back to his place, I, Abraham, alone,¹⁰ because he was heavy, being of a large stone,¹¹ and I went forth and made it known to my father. And he entered with me, and when both of us moved him (the god) forward, so that we might bring him back¹² to his place, his head fell from him¹ while I was still holding him by the head. And it came to pass,² when my father saw that the head of Merumath³ had fallen from him, he said to me: "Abraham!" And I said: "Here am I." And he said to me: "Bring me an axe, of the small ones,⁴ from the house." And I brought it to him.⁵ And he hewed aright another Merumath out of another stone, without head, and the head which had been thrown down from Merumath he placed upon it, and the rest of Merumath he shattered.⁵

³ Abraham is represented as having followed the occupation of his father, that of an idol-maker; cf. Bereshith rabba on Gen. xi. 28 (see Appendix, p. 58).

II. And he made five other gods, and gave them to me [and]⁶ commanded me to sell them outside in the street of the town. And I saddled my father's⁷ ass, and placed them upon it, and went towards the inn to sell them. And lo! merchants from Fandana⁸ in Syria were travelling with camels going to Egypt,⁹ to trade.¹⁰ And I spoke with them. And one of their camels uttered a groan, and the ass took fright and sprang away and upset the gods; and three of them were smashed, and two were preserved. And it came to pass, when the Syrians saw that I had gods, they said to me: "Why didst thou not tell us [that thou hadst gods? Then we would have bought them]¹¹ before the ass heard the sound of the camel, and they would not have been lost. Give us, at any rate, the gods that remain, and we will give thee the proper price¹² for the broken gods, also for the gods that have been preserved."¹² For I was concerned in my heart as to how I could bring to my father the purchase-price;¹³ and the three broken ones I cast into the water of the river Gur, which was at that place, and they sank into the depths,¹⁴ and there was nothing more of them.

III. When I was still going on the way, my heart was perplexed within me, and my mind was distracted. And I said in my heart: ["What evil deed is this that my father is doing? Is not he, rather, the god of his gods, since they come into existence through his chisels and lathes, and his wisdom, and is it not rather fitting that they should worship my father, since they are his work? What is this delusion of my father in his works?]¹⁵ Behold, Merumath fell and could not rise in his own temple, nor could I, by myself, move him until my father came, and the two of us moved him; and as we were thus too weak, his head fell from him, and he (i.e. my father) set it upon another stone of

And the other five gods were broken in pieces down from the ass, which were able-neither to help themselves,² nor to hurt the ass, because³ it had broken them to pieces; nor did their broken fragments come up out of the river.”⁴ And I said in my heart: “If this be so, how can Merumath, my father’s god, having the head of another stone,⁵ and himself being made of another stone,⁵ rescue a man, or hear a man’s prayer and reward him?”⁶

IV. And while I cogitated thus, I reached my father’s house; and having watered the ass, and set out hay for it, I brought the silver and gave it into the hand of my father Terah. When he saw it he was glad, [and]⁷ he said: “Blessed art thou, Abraham, of my gods,⁸ because thou hast brought the price of the gods, so that my work was not in vain.” And I answered and said to him: “Hear, O my father, Terah! Blessed are the gods⁹ of thee, for thou art their god, since⁹ thou hast made them; for their blessing is ruination, and their power¹⁰ is vain;¹¹ they who did not help themselves,¹² how shall they, then, help thee or bless me¹³? I have been kind to thee in this affair,¹⁴ because by (using) my intelligence, I have brought thee the money for the broken gods.” And when he heard my¹⁵ word, he became furiously angry with me, because I had spoken hard words against his gods.

V. I, however, having thought over my father’s anger, went out; [and after I had gone out]¹⁶ my father¹⁷ cried, saying: “Abraham!” And I said: “Here am I.” And he said: “Take and collect the splinters of the wood out of which I made gods of pine-wood before thou camest; and make ready for me the food of the mid-day meal.”¹⁸ And it came to pass, when I collected the splinters of wood, I found under them a little god which had been lying among the brush-wood on my left, and on his forehead was written: GOD BARISAT.¹⁹ And²⁰ I did not

And it came to pass, when I had laid the splinters in the fire, in order that I might make ready food for my father—on going out to ask a question regarding the food, I placed Barisat before the kindled fire,¹ saying threateningly to him: “Pay careful attention, Barisat, [that]² the fire do not die down until I come; if, however, it dieth down, blow on it that it may burn up again.” And I went out and accomplished my purpose.³ And on returning I found Barisat fallen backwards, and⁴ his feet surrounded by fire and horribly burnt.⁵ I burst into a fit of laughter, and I said to myself: “Truly, O Barisat, thou canst kindle the fire and cook food!” And it came to pass, while I spake (thus) in my laughter⁶ he (i.e. Barisat) was gradually burnt up by the fire and reduced⁷ to ashes. And I brought the food to my father, and he did eat. And I gave him wine and milk,⁸ and he was gladdened and blessed his god Merumath. And I said to him: “O father Terah, bless not thy god Merumath, and praise him not, but rather praise thy god Barisat because, loving thee more, he hath cast himself into the fire to cook thy food!” And he said to me: “And where is he now?” [And I said:]⁹ “He is burnt to ashes in the violence of the fire and is reduced to dust.” And he said: “Great is the power of Barisat! I (will) make another to-day, and to-morrow he will prepare¹⁰ my food.”

VI. When I, Abraham, however, heard such words from my father, I laughed in my mind and sighed in the grief and in the anger of my soul, and said:¹¹ “How then can that which is made by him—manufactured statues—be a helper of my father? Or shall the body then be subject to its soul, and the soul to the spirit, and the spirit to folly and ignorance!”¹² And I said:¹¹ “It is fitting once to endure evil. So I will direct my mind to what is pure and lay my thoughts open before him.” [And]¹³ I answered and said: “O father Terah, whichever of these thou praisest as a god, thou art foolish in thy mind. Behold the gods of thy brother Ora,¹⁴ which stand in the holy temple, are more worthy of honour than [these of]¹⁵ thine. For behold Zucheus, the god of thy brother Oron,¹⁶ is more worthy of honour than thy god

PART II

THE APOCALYPSE (Chapters IX.-XXXII.).

Abraham receives a Divine Command to offer Sacrifice after Forty Days as a Preparation for a Divine Revelation (Chapter IX.; cf. Gen. xv.).

IX. Then a voice came to me speaking twice: "Abraham, Abraham!" And I said: "Here am I!" And He said: "Behold, ¹it is I; *fear not,*² for I am before the worlds,³ and a mighty God who hath created ⁴the light of the world.⁴ *I am a shield over thee,*² and I am thy helper. Go, take me *a young heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtledove and a pigeon,*⁵ and bring me a pure sacrifice. And in this sacrifice I will lay before thee the ages (to come), and make known to thee what is reserved, and thou shalt see great things which thou hast not seen (hitherto);⁶ because thou hast loved to search me out, and I have named thee my Friend.⁷ But abstain⁸ from every form of food that proceedeth out of the fire, and from the drinking of wine, and from anointing (thyself) with oil, forty days,"⁹ and then set forth for me the sacrifice which I have commanded thee, in the place *which I will shew thee, on a high mountain,*¹⁰ and there I will shew thee the ages which have been created and established, ¹¹made and renewed,¹¹ by my Word,¹² and¹³ I will make known to thee what ³ Or ages ("æons").

⁵ Cf. Gen. xv. 9.

⁷ Or "lover." Abraham, as God's chosen friend (or "lover of God," cf. 2 Chron. xx. 7, Is. xli. 8, Ep. James ii. 23) can receive special revelation; for the juxtaposition of the two ideas cf. 4 Ezra iii. 14.

⁸ Or refrain thyself. By every form of food that proceedeth out of the fire, flesh-meat is no doubt meant.

⁹ Fasting as a preparation for the reception of a divine revelation was much practised by the apocalyptists. In 4 Ezra four fasts of seven days followed in each case by a divine revelation are referred to. Here, it is to be noted, the period is one of forty days. For the terms here used cf. 4 Ezra ix. 24. Anointing the body (especially the face) with oil was a mark of joy used in connexion with feasting (cf. Eccles. ix. 8, Ps. xxiii. 5, Amos vi. 6), and omitted in mourning as a sign of grief (cf. 2 Sam. xiv. 2, Dan. x. 3).

¹⁰ Cf. Gen. xxii. 2.

¹¹ A omits.

¹² The "Word" of God here has a quasi-personal significance; cf. 4 Ezra vi. 38 ("and thy Word, O Lord, perfected the work"), 43, etc.

Abraham, under the Direction of the Angel Jaobel, proceeds to Mount Horeb, a Journey of Forty Days, to offer the Sacrifice (Chapters X.-XII.).

X. And it came to pass, when I heard the voice of Him who spake such words to me, (and)¹ I looked hither and thither and lo! there was no breath of a man,^{2 3} and my spirit was affrighted, and my soul fled from me, and I became like a stone, and fell down upon the earth, for³ I had no more strength to stand on the earth.^{4 5} And while I was still lying with my face upon the earth,⁵ I heard the voice of the Holy One speaking: “Go, Jaobel,⁶ and by means of my ineffable Name raise me yonder man, and strengthen him (so that he recover) from his trembling.” And the angel came, whom He had sent to me, in the likeness of a man, and⁷ grasped me by my right hand, and set me up upon my feet, and said to me:⁸ “⁹Stand up,⁹ [Abraham,]¹⁰ Friend of God who loveth thee; let not¹¹ the trembling of man seize thee! For, lo! I have been sent to thee to strengthen thee and bless thee in the name of God—who loveth thee—the Creator of the celestial and terrestrial. Be fearless and hasten to Him. ⁶ The name of the archangel Joel (Jaobel) is differently spelt in the various texts (cf. the Slavonic version of The Book of Adam, ed. by Jagić, in Denkschriften des Kaiserlichen Akademie der Wissenschaften in Wien, philol.-histor. Classe, Vol. XLII): S, Naoil, Iloil; A, Aol, K, Jaol, Book of Adam, Joil = Joel. Jaobel (= Heb. Yahoel) is represented in our Apocalypse as a being possessed of the power of the ineffable name, a function assigned in the Rabbinical writings to Metatron, “whose name is like unto that of God Himself” (T.B. Sanh. 38b). The name Yahoel (Jaobel) is evidently a substitute for the ineffable name Yahweh, the writing out of which in full was forbidden. In chap. xvii. below God Himself is addressed as Jaobel. For Jaobel as the heavenly choirmaster cf. note on chap. xvii.

the one who hath been given to restrain, according to His commandment, the threatening attack of the living creatures of the Cherubim against one another,¹ and teach those who carry Him² the song of the seventh hour of the night of man.³ I am ordained to restrain the Leviathan, for unto me are subject the attack and menace of every single reptile.⁴ [I am he who hath been commissioned to loosen Hades, to destroy him who stareth at the dead.]⁵ I am the one who was commissioned to set on fire thy father's house together with him, because he displayed

² i.e. "the holy hayyoth ['living creatures'] who carry the throne of glory" (Sifra on Lev. i. 1).

⁵ The bracketed clause is omitted by S. One of Michael's functions (with Gabriel) is to open the gates of Hell and release the sinners therein; see Yalqut Shim. on Is. xxvi. 2, and cf. Lueken, op. cit., p. 52. What is meant by "destroying" him who stareth at the dead is not clear. It might conceivably refer to the duty of burying the dead. To allow a corpse—even an enemy's—to remain unburied was considered an impiety (cf. Ps. lxxix. 2 f.; Tobit i. 17, ii. 7; Josephus, Apion, ii. 29), and it is notable that, according to The Life of Adam and Eve, xlvi. 4 f.; (cf. Charles, Corpus ii. 151), Michael and Uriel bury the bodies of Adam and Abel in Paradise. But the language of the phrase here hardly suits this. In view of the next clause, where "dead" = dead idols, the reference may perhaps be to idol-worship. In a Byzantine text the story of Michael's contest with the devil about the body of Moses is given a somewhat similar motive. The devil is represented as seeking to bring down Moses' dead body to the Israelites in order that they may worship it—and this may depend originally upon a Jewish source which in this way protested against the Christian worship of saints and relics (cf. Lueken, op. cit., p. 121 f.). But perhaps stareth at should be altered to terrifieth, and the reference is to Death personified; cf. Add. Note, p. 55 f.

reverence for dead (idols).¹ I have been sent to bless thee now, and the land² which the Eternal One, whom thou hast invoked, hath prepared for thee, and for thy sake have I wended my way upon the earth.³ Stand up, Abraham! Go without fear; be right glad and rejoice; and I am with thee! For eternal honour hath been prepared for thee by the Eternal One. Go, fulfil the sacrifices commanded. For lo! I have been appointed to be with thee and with the generation prepared (to spring) from thee; and with me Michael⁴ blesseth thee for ever. Be of good cheer, go!”

XI. And I rose up and saw him who had grasped me by my right hand and set me up upon my feet: and the appearance of his body⁵ was like sapphire, and the look of his countenance like chrysolite, and the hair of his head like snow, and the turban upon his head⁶ like the appearance of the rainbow, and the clothing of his garments like purple; and a golden sceptre was in his right hand.⁷ And he said to me: “Abraham!” And I said: “Here am I, thy servant.” And he said: “Let not my look affright thee, nor my speech, that thy soul be not perturbed.”⁸ Come with me and I will go with thee, until the sacrifice, visible, but after the sacrifice,⁹ invisible for ever. Be of good cheer, and come!”

XII. And we went, the two of us together, forty days and nights,¹⁰ and I ate no bread, and drank no water, because my food¹¹ was to see the angel who was with me, and his

² i.e. the land of Palestine. In Mohammedan tradition Michael is the good angel who brings peace and plenty.

⁵ K, + his feet (a gloss? suggested by Rev. i. 15).

⁶ Cf. Rev. xix. 12 (“upon his head many diadems”).

⁷ Cf. Rev. i. 16 (“and he had in his right hand seven stars”). There is a general resemblance here to the description of the exalted Christ in Rev. i. 14-16, but the details are different except that both have the characteristic descriptive phrase, derived from Dan. vii. 9 (“the hair of his head like pure wool,” here “like snow,” cf. Rev. i. 14); cf. also 2 Enoch i. 5 (the description of the two angels who visit Enoch). The figure described is regal (notice the purple garments and the sceptre), and is invested with the divine glory; cf. Ezek. 26 f.

⁸ Or “troubled”; cf. 2 Enoch i. 8, and often in apocalyptic writings.

speech—that was my drink.¹ And we came to the Mount of God, the glorious Horeb. And I said to the angel: “Singer of the Eternal One! Lo! I have no sacrifice with me,² nor am I aware of a place of an altar on the mountain: how can I bring a sacrifice?” And he said to me: “Look round!”³ ⁴And I looked round,⁴ and lo! there were following us all the prescribed sacrificial (animals)—the young heifer, and the she-goat, and the ram, and the turtle-dove, and the pigeon.⁵ And the angel said to me: “Abraham!” I said: “Here am I.” And he said to me: “All these slaughter, and divide the animals into halves, one against the other, but the birds do not sever;⁶ and (“but”) give to the men, whom I will shew thee, standing by thee, for these are the altar⁷ upon the Mountain, to offer a sacrifice to the Eternal; but the turtledove and the pigeon give to me, for I will ascend upon the wings of the bird,⁸ in order to shew thee in heaven, and on the earth, and in the sea, and in the abyss, and in the under-world, and in the Garden of Eden, and in its rivers and in the fulness of the whole world and its circle—thou shalt gaze in (them) all.”⁹

And I waited for the evening sacrifice. And there flew an unclean bird down upon the carcasses,¹¹ and I drove it away. ¹ Cf. John iv. 31-34. Elijah ate and drank before starting on his journey to Horeb, and “went in the strength of that meat forty days and forty nights” (1 Kings xix. 8): cf. Ex. xxiv. 18. There is a close parallel to our text in Philo, Life of Moses, Bk. III. 1, where it is said of Moses in the Mount: “he neglected all meat and drink for forty days together, evidently because he had more excellent food than that in those contemplations with which he was inspired from above from heaven.”

⁷ Living men (or rather angels) take the place of the material altar; cf. the metaphorical use of “temple” as applied to the body (cf. John ii. 21; 1 Cor. iii. 16, vi. 19). But such a use of the term “altar” does not appear to have become current in Jewish literature.

⁸ The ascent to heaven is accomplished on the wings of a dove. The dove is appropriate in this connexion because of its swiftness (cf. Ps. lv. (6) 7, “Oh that I had wings like a dove,” etc.; cf. also Virgil, Æn. vi. 190 ff.), and its purity. For the symbolism of the dove applied to Israel, and also to the Holy Spirit (Matt. iii. 16), cf. ³ Cf. Zech. v. 8.

⁷ For the sin and misery brought upon the earth by the fallen angels cf. 1 Enoch viii. 2, ix. 6, 8, x. 7 f., etc.

¹⁰ [Lit. “counsellor,” an idiomatic expression still found in Russian dialects (cf. Dalj’s Dictionary of the Russian Language, s.v. sovetnik) meaning “friend,” used in a good-humoured way.—J. I. L.]

¹¹ The “heavenly garments” are here referred to “which are now stored up on high in the seventh heaven” according to Asc. Is. iv. 16. The idea, originally a realistic one, was gradually spiritualised, and came to mean the spiritual bodies in which the righteous will be clothed in heaven; cf. 1 Enoch lxii. 15 f. (“garments of glory,” “garments of life”); cf. also 2 Enoch xxii. 8 f., where Michael is bidden by God to “take from Enoch his earthly robe . . . and clothe him with the garment of my glory.” In The Ascension of Isaiah the seer is unable to ascend to the highest heaven until his “garment” has been brought to him

(Asc. Is. ix. 1-2). There he sees the crowns and garments which are reserved for the righteous (ibid. ix. 13 ff.); cf. also Asc. Is. viii. 14; Rev. iii. 4, 5, 18, vi. 11, vii. 9; 2 Cor. v. 3 ff.

XIV. The angel said to me: ²[“Abraham!” And I said: “Here am I, thy servant.” And he said: “Know from henceforth that the Eternal One hath chosen thee, (He) whom thou lovest; be of good courage and use this authority, so far as I bid thee, against him who slandereth truth;³ should I not be able to put him to shame who hath scattered over the earth the secrets of heaven⁴ and hath rebelled⁵ against the Mighty One?⁶] ⁷Say to him: ‘Be thou the burning coal of the Furnace of the earth;⁸ go, Azazel, into the inaccessible parts of the earth;⁹[for thy heritage is (to be) over those existing with thee being born with the stars and clouds,¹⁰ with the men whose portion thou art, and (who) through thy being exist;¹¹ and thine enmity is justification. On this account by thy perdition disappear from me.” And

³ Cf. John viii. 44 (“he [the Devil] is a liar and the father thereof”). Satan—here Azazel—is par excellence “the slanderer” (ὁ διάβολος), “he who slandereth truth.”

⁷ Bracketed clause attested by A K, omitted by S.

⁸ Azazel is condemned to be in himself the fire of Hell; cf. xxxi. (“burnt with the fire of Azazel’s tongue”). Thus wherever he goes he, as it were, carries Hell with him—a conception that appears to be peculiar to our Apocalypse in early apocalyptic literature (cf. Volz, p. 291).

⁹ i. e. into those parts of the earth reserved for him till the final judgement. In 1 Enoch x. 4 Azazel is condemned to be bound and placed in Dudâêl, in the desert, and there to be imprisoned in darkness till the final judgement.

¹⁰ This expression is obscure. It apparently refers to the men who belong (? by birth) to Azazel, whose lot has been pre-determined (see next note).

¹¹ The wicked are Azazel’s “portion,” i. e. they have been assigned to him from the beginning. The idea seems to be predestinarian; cf. Wisdom ii. 24 (“by the envy of the devil death entered into the world, and they that are his portion make trial thereof”), Ap. Bar. xlii. 7 (“for corruption will take those that belong to it, and life those that belong to it”); 1 Enoch xli. 8. [Does the phrase in the previous clause, “being born with the stars and clouds,” mean those who by birth and creation belong to the sphere of night and darkness, as opposed to the righteous, who belong to the realm of light? See 1 Enoch xli. 8 and Charles’s note.]

I uttered the words which the angel had taught me. And he said: "Abraham!" And I said: "Here am I, thy servant."]¹

And the angel said to me: "Answer him not; for God hath given him power (lit. will) over those who do answer him."² [And the angel spake to me a second time and said: "Now rather, however much he speak to thee, answer him not, that his will may have no free course in thee, because the Eternal and Mighty One hath given him ³weight and will;³ answer him not." I did what was commanded me by the angel;]⁴ and however much he spake to me, I answered him ⁵nothing whatsoever.⁵

Abraham and the Angel ascend on the Wings of the Birds to Heaven (Chapters XV.-XVI.).

XV. And it came to pass *when the sun went down, and lo! a smoke as of a furnace.*⁶ And the angels who had the portions of the sacrifice⁷ ascended from the top of the smoking furnace. And the Angel took me with the⁸ right hand and set me on the right wing of the pigeon, and set himself on the left⁹ wing of the turtle dove, which (birds) had neither been slaughtered nor divided. And he bore me to the borders of the flaming fire [and we ascended as with many winds to the heaven which was fixed upon the surface.¹⁰ And I saw on the air]¹¹ on the height, to which we ascended a strong light, which it was impossible to describe,¹² and lo! in this light a fiercely burning fire for people, many people of male appearance,¹³ all (constantly) changing in aspect and form, running and being transformed, and worshipping and crying with a sound of words which I knew not.¹⁴

¹ The bracketed clause is attested by A K, but is absent from S. It may be a later interpolation (but see Introduction).

³ The text may be corrupt. It might mean an over-powering will.

⁴ The bracketed clause is attested by A K, but is absent from S. It is obviously a parallel and alternative text to the preceding clause.

¹³ K, sex.

¹⁴ The description refers to the host of angels who are born daily, sing their song of praise before God, and then disappear; cf. Genesis rabba lxxviii. 1: Rabbi Helbo in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman said: "One angel-host never repeats the song of praise, but every morning God creates a new angel-host and these cantillate a new song before Him and then disappear." They are created daily out of the stream of fire that proceeds from the holy hayyoth (ibid.); cf. Ps. civ. 4. Cf. also 2 Enoch xxix. 3: "And from the fire I made the ranks of the spiritual hosts, ten thousand angels, and their weapons are fiery, and their garment is a burning flame"; see further Weber, p. 166 f.

XVI. And I said to the Angel: “Why¹ hast thou brought me up here now, because I² cannot now see, for I am already grown weak, and my spirit departeth from me?”³ And he said to me: “Remain by me; fear not! And He whom thou seest come straight towards us with great voice of holiness⁴—that is the Eternal One who Loveth thee; but Himself thou canst not see).⁵ But let not thy spirit grow faint [on account of the loud crying],⁶ for I am with thee, strengthening thee.”

Abraham, taught by the Angel, utters the Celestial Song and prays for Enlightenment (Chapter XVII.).

⁴ i. e. proclaiming His holiness, so A; in S the word is corrupt. K (which may preserve the right reading here) has: “[with a great voice] saying: Holy, holy, holy is the Lord.” In 1 Enoch xxxix. 12 the trisagion (Is. vi. 5) is the song of the angelic watchers.

⁵ God is Himself invisible.

⁶ Omitted by S.

⁷ The Divine Presence is revealed by fire (Ex. iii. 2, Deut. iv. 36, Ps. lxxviii. 14), and God Himself is spoken of as “a consuming fire” (Deut. iv. 24, ix. 3). But here the fiery chariot which bore the Divine Presence is probably thought of; cf. Ezek. i. 4 (“a great cloud with a fire infolding itself”).

⁸ A omits.

⁹ Cf. Rev. i. 15 (Dan. x. 6). This feature is part of the supernatural colouring so characteristic of Apocalyptic—the heavenly light is of dazzling brilliance, the divine voice is like thunder (cf. 2 Enoch xxxix. 7: “like great thunder with continual agitation of the clouds”); see Volz, Der Geist Gottes, p. 120 f.

¹⁰ Cf. Is. xvii. 12.

¹¹ A strongly Jewish touch—divine honour may be paid to God alone, and to none other, even the most exalted of heavenly beings; cf. Rev. xxii. 9.

¹² S omits.

¹³ This description is interesting. The seer has ascended “as with many winds” to heaven, and is standing “on the height” (chap. xv.). He experiences a strong feeling of desire to fall down upon the earth, because the high place on which he is standing with the angel, at one moment rose upright, at another plunged downward (cf. 4 Ezra vi. 29 and 13-16). The commotion is produced by the Divine Voice. In chap. xxx. the seer finds himself suddenly (while God is speaking) again upon the earth.

jealous over me and very compassionate;¹¹

¹ Only the angels understand how to utter the divine song of praise, though the blessed among mortals may (as here) be taught to sing thus in a state of ecstasy. Each of the angelic spheres has its own “Voice” (cf. 1 Enoch xl. 3 ff.), and the angelic language is incomprehensible to mortals (cf. chap. xv. above, end), though the illuminated and inspired seer may be taught both to understand and utter such “words” (as here; cf. ἐν γλώσσαις λαλεῖν in N.T.). The exalted Enoch in heaven underwent a similar experience (cf. 1 Enoch lxxi. 11 f.: “I fell on my face and my whole body melted away, but my spirit was transfigured, and I cried with a loud voice,” etc.), as also did Isaiah (Asc. Is. viii. 17). According to Philo no beings can adequately express the praise due to God (Life of Moses, ii. xxxi. [§ 239]), contrast Ecclus. xxxix. 6. See further Volz, op. cit., p. 137.

² A omits.

³ S omits. In Asc. Is. viii. 17 the inspired seer joins with the angel in the celestial song of praise.

⁴ K, + the first song of Abraham which I, the holy angel Jaol, taught him (while) moving with him in the air.

⁵ A K omit El.

⁶ Cf. the opening lines of the Jewish mediæval hymn, 'Adon 'ôlām “Lord of the world He reigned alone, while yet creation was unformed,” and for “self-originated” the phrase “beginningless” (bēlî rē'shūth) applied to God in the same context. The divine name Shaddai was traditionally explained as = “the self-sufficient” (shē-dai hū lô). This idea may underlie the text here.

⁷ Cf. Heb. vii. 3, ἀπάτωρ ἀμήτωρ ἀγενεαλόγητος, of Melchizedek (= Heb. bē'ên 'āb bē'ên 'ēm bē'ên yahas). As Westcott remarks (ad loc.), “The words (ἀπάτωρ, ἀμήτωρ) were used constantly in Greek mythology (e.g. of Athene and Hephæstus); and so passed into the loftier conceptions of the Deity, as in that of Trismegistus quoted by Lactantius (iv. 13): ipse enim pater Deus et origo et principium rerum quoniam parentibus caret ἀπάτωρ atque ἀμήτωρ Trismegisto verissime nominatur, quod ex nullo sit procreatus.”

⁸ = φιλάνθρωπον: cf. Wisdom i. 6 (“For Wisdom is a spirit that loveth men” [φιλάνθρωπον πνεῦμα].

¹⁰ = χαριστικός.

¹¹ Cf. Deut. v. 9 f. The whole clause (from “lover of men” to “compassionate”) contains a short summary of the divine attributes based upon Ex. xxxiv. 6, 7, a passage much used in later literature (cf. e. g. Wisdom xv. 1), and especially in the Liturgy; cf. 4 Ezra vii. 132-viii. 3 and the writer's notes thereon. These attributes are predicable especially of the Tetragrammaton (Jahveh), which connotes more particularly the elements of mercy and compassion, while 'Elōhām denotes multiplied power (the Almighty), and is associated with the idea of justice and fixed law; 'El is part of 'Elōhām and denotes simply power.

Eli, that is, My God—
 Eternal, mighty holy Sabaoth,¹
 very glorious El, El, El, El, Jael!²
 Thou art He whom my soul hath loved!
 Eternal Protector, shining like fire,
 Whose voice is like the thunder,³
 Whose look is like the lightning, all-seeing,⁴
 Who receiveth the prayers of such as honour Thee!

[And turneth away from the requests of such as embarrass with the embarrassment of their provocations,

Who dissolveth the confusions of the world⁵ which arise from the ungodly and righteous⁶ in the corruptible age,⁷ renewing the age of the righteous!⁸]⁹

Thou, O Light, shinest¹⁰ before the light of the¹¹
 morning upon Thy creatures,

¹ The use of Sabaoth alone as a designation of God is unusual, but not unexampled; cf. Ex. rabba iii. 6 [in answer to Moses' question, What is His name? Ex. iii. 13]: "The Holy One, blessed be He, said: Dost thou seek to know my name? I am called according to my deeds. I am called at various times by the names 'El Shaddai, Sabaoth, Elohim, Jahveh. When I judge the creatures I am named Elohim, and when I wage war against the wicked I am called Sabaoth, and when I suspend (the punishment) of man's sins I am called 'El Shaddai, and when I compassionate my world I am called Jahveh, because Jahveh means nought else but the attribute of compassion, as it is said (Ex. xxxiv. 6 f.) Jahveh, Jahveh a God full of compassion," etc.

² The fourfold El (attested only by S) looks like a substitution for the Tetragrammaton; Jaol (here applied to God) is undoubtedly so. Elsewhere in this book it is the designation of the archangel.

³ Cf. Note³ at beginning of this chapter.

⁴ Cf. Dan. x. 6 ("and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire") and Ezek. i. 13, 14.

⁵ Lit. "the all" (Heb. ha-kōl); the expression is sometimes so used in the later Hebrew Liturgy.

⁷ i. e. the present corruptible age (or "æon"); cf. 4 Ezra vii. 112, xiv. 13 ("the life that is corruptible").

⁹ The bracketed clause is attested by A K, but omitted by S; it is probably an interpolation. The rhythm is much improved by its omission.

Eliezer iii.). This heavenly light was afterwards withdrawn; the luminaries receive their light from a spark of it. For light as a symbol of blessedness cf. Volz, Eschatologie, p. 328. Ps. xix. contrasts natural (created) and spiritual light.

¹¹ Perhaps, as Ginzberg suggests, “before the morning light” is a mistranslation of the Semitic original “before the primæval morning” (’ôr rîshôn or nêhôrâ kadmōniyyā). The meaning of the original line would be that God at first illumined the earth with the heavenly radiance.

[so that it becometh¹ day upon the earth,]²
And in Thy² heavenly dwelling places there is no need of any other light than (that) of the unspeakable splendour from the lights of Thy countenance.³
Accept my prayer [and be well-pleased with it],⁴

Accept me favourably, and shew me, and teach me,
And make known to Thy servant as thou hast promised me!⁵

³ Cf. Rev. xxii. 5, xxi. 23, Is. lx. 19 f. [The theme is expanded in the Synagogue Liturgy in connexion with the Benediction over light which precedes the recitation of the Shema: “Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who formest light and createst darkness. . . . Yea, eternal light (Heb. ’ôr ’ôlām) in the treasury of life; for He spake, and out of darkness there was light.”]

⁴ The bracketed clause is attested by A K; S omits.

⁵ Abraham prays that the sacrifice may be accepted, and as a result of this that the secrets of the future may be disclosed by revelation. The prayer seems to be a personal addition to the song of praise on the part of Abraham. The structure of the whole with its opening invocation, made up of clauses describing the divine attributes and transcendence, and followed by a prayer, is similar to that of 4 Ezra viii. 20 ff. (cf. especially verses 20-27), which is also poetical in form. Here it is to be noticed that the “song” proper appears to be a midrashic development of the divine attributes and character as deduced from the various names of God (El Shaddai, Elohim, Jahveh, Sabaoth).

⁶ S omits.

⁷ So A K; S is corrupt here.

all-seeing ones,¹ reciting the song, and under the throne four fiery living creatures singing, and their appearance was one, *each one of them with four faces.*² And³ such was the appearance of their countenances, *of a lion, of a man, of an ox, of an eagle:*⁴ four heads [were upon their bodies]⁵ [so that the four creatures had sixteen faces];⁶ and each had six wings;⁷ from their shoulders, [and their sides]⁸ and their loins. And with the (two) wings from their shoulders they covered their faces, and with the (two) wings which (sprang) from their loins they covered their feet, while the (two) middle wings they spread out for flying straightforward.⁹ And when they had ended the singing, they looked at one another and threatened one another.¹⁰ And it came to pass when the angel who was with me saw that they were threatening each other, he left me and went running to them and turned the countenance of each living creature from the countenance immediately confronting him, in order that they might not see their countenances threatening each other.¹¹ And he taught them the song of peace which ¹²hath its origin [in the Eternal One].¹²

And as I stood alone and looked, I saw behind the living creatures a chariot with fiery wheels, each wheel full of eyes round about;¹³ and over the wheels was a throne;¹⁴ which I saw, and this was covered with fire, and fire encircled it round about,¹⁵ and lo! an indescribable fire environed a fiery host. And I heard its holy voice like the voice of a man.¹⁶

⁶ The bracketed clause is attested by A K; S omits. It looks like a scribal gloss.

⁷ So Rev. iv. 8 (based on Is. vi. 2); in Ezek. i. 6 the four “living creatures” have each four wings. Here S reads three (i. e. ? three pairs of wings).

⁸ S omits.

⁹ Cf. Is. vi. 2, Ezek. i. 11, 12.

¹⁰ The underlying idea of this strange representation seems to be that of emulation and rivalry (in service). This may be illustrated from the Midrash Tauhuma on Gen. ii. 4 (ed. Buber, p. 10), where in a comment on the verse Dominion and fear are with him, he maketh peace in his high places (Job xxv. 2) it is said: “Dominion, i. e. Michael, and fear, i. e. Gabriel; who maketh peace in his high places, even the celestials (hā‘elyônîm) need peace. The constellations rise: Taurus says, “I am first, and I see what is before him”; the Gemini say, “I am first, and I see what is before him”; and so every single one says, “I am first” (corrected text). It is to be noted that in the mystical Hebrew literature concerned with the theme of the Divine Chariot and Throne (Merkaba) the angels who guard the Chariot are represented as fierce and warlike in aspect—flames dart forth from their eyes, and they are armed with fiery weapons (cf. Jellinek, Beth ha-Midrash iii. 94 f.). See further Additional Note II (p. 87).”

¹¹ The relative position of the celestial beings about the divine throne is thus described in the Liturgy: “The hayyoth [‘living creatures’] sing: the Cherubim glorify: the Seraphim exult, and the Arelim bless. The face of every hayya, Ophan, and Cherub is set toward the Seraphim, and thus confronting each the other, they utter praise and say, Blessed be the glory of the Lord from His place” (Service of the Synagogue, Festival Prayers (New Year), p. 87 (ed. Davis)).

God discloses to Abraham the Powers of Heaven
(Chapter XIX.).

XIX. And a voice came to me out of the midst of the fire, saying: "Abraham, Abraham!" I said: "Here am I!"¹ And He said: "Consider the expanses which are under the firmament on which thou art (now) placed,² and see how on no single expanse is there any other but He whom thou hast sought, or who hath loved thee."³ And while He⁴ was yet speaking (and) lo! the expanses opened, and beneath me⁵ the heavens. And I saw upon the seventh firmament upon which I stood a fire widely extended, and light, and dew, and a multitude of angels, and a power of invisible glory over the living creatures which I saw; but no other being did I see there.⁶

And I looked from the mountain⁷ in which I stood⁷ [downwards]⁸ to the sixth firmament, and saw there a multitude of angels, of (pure) spirit, without bodies, who carried out the commands of the fiery angels who were upon the eighth⁹ firmament, as I was standing suspended over them. And behold, upon this firmament¹⁰ there were no other powers¹⁰ of (any) other form, but only angels of (pure) spirit, like the power which I saw on the seventh firmament.¹¹ And He commanded¹² that the sixth firmament¹³ should be taken away.¹² And I saw there, on the fifth firmament,¹³ the powers of the stars which carry out the commands laid upon them, and the elements of the earth obeyed them.¹⁴

¹ Cf. Ex. iii. 4, 4 Ezra xiv. 1 (K, + Lord).

² Abraham is now presumably "placed" in the seventh heaven, and surveys from above what is disclosed to him as existing in the various firmaments below him, and in the earth (the angels, celestial bodies, and everything that is moving on the earth).

³ ? God is the sole controller of all these, and in this sense is the only reality.

⁶ In Asc. Is. vii. 7 f. it is said that Isaiah saw in the seventh heaven "a wonderful light and angels innumerable," and "all the righteous from the time of Adam" (including Abel and Enoch); in T. B. Hag. 12b the seventh heaven (Araboth) contains judgement and righteousness, the treasures of life, peace, and blessing, the souls of the departed righteous, the spirits and souls yet unborn, the dew with which God will awake the dead, the Seraphim, Ophanim, Hayyoth, and other angels of service, and God Himself sitting on the Throne of Glory. No doubt the "dew" in our passage is the resurrection-dew. Fire and light are much dwelt upon in this connexion. Possibly this mystical literature was influenced by the cult of Mithra, who was especially the God of Light.

¹⁴ In T. B. Hag. 12b the sun, moon, and stars are located in the second heaven; in 2 Enoch xi. 1-5 "the course of the sun" and the angels "which wait upon the sun" are located in the fourth heaven.

The Promise of a Seed (Chapter XX.).

XX. And the Eternal Mighty One said to me: "Abraham, Abraham!" And I said: "Here am I." [And He said:]¹ "Consider from above the stars which are beneath thee, and number,² them [for me],³ and make known [to me]³ their number." And I said: "When can I? For I am but a man [of dust and ashes].⁴ And he said to me: "As the number of the stars and their power, (so will) I make thy seed a nation⁵ and a people, set apart for me in my heritage with Azazel."⁶

And I said: "O Eternal, Mighty One! Let thy servant speak before Thee, and let not Thine anger kindle against Thy chosen one!⁷ Lo, before Thou ledest me up Azazel inveighed against me. How, then, while he is not now before Thee, hast Thou constituted Thyself with him?"

A Vision of Sin and Paradise: the Mirror of the World (Chapter XXI.).

XXI. And He said to me: "Look, now, beneath thy feet at the firmaments⁸ and understand⁹ the creation¹⁰ foreshadowed¹¹ in this expanse, the creatures existing on it, and the age¹² prepared according to it." And I saw beneath [the surfaces of the¹³ feet, and I saw beneath]¹⁴ the sixth heaven¹⁵ and what was therein,¹⁶ and then the earth and its fruits, and what moved upon it and its animate beings;¹⁷ and the power of its men, and the ungodliness of their souls, and their righteous deeds [and the beginnings of their works],¹⁸ and the lower regions¹⁹ and the perdition therein, the Abyss²⁰ and its torments. ⁶ The underlying idea seems to be that God's heritage, the created world, is, under the conditions of sin, "shared" with Azazel (see further Introduction, p. xxxii), i. e. it is largely under the dominion of evil powers. This is one of the fundamental conceptions of Apocalyptic. On the other hand, the Chosen People—who are ideally identified with the righteous—redeem the world, and in themselves make it once again fit to be God's heritage. From another point of view the same question is discussed in 4 Ezra—the problem, why, if the world was created for Israel, is Israel disinherited? (cf. 4 Ezra vi. 38-59).

islands, and its monsters and its fishes, and Leviathan and his dominion,¹ and his camping-ground, and his caves, and the world which lay upon him,² and his movements, and the destructions of the world on his account.³ I saw there streams and the rising of their waters, and their windings. And I saw there the Garden of Eden and its fruits, the source⁴ of the stream issuing from it, and its trees and their bloom, and those who behaved righteously. And I saw therein their foods and blessedness.⁵ And I saw there a great multitude—men and women and children [half of them on the right side of the picture]⁶ and half of them on the left side of the picture.⁷

The Fall of Man and its Sequel (Chapters XXII-XXV.).

XXII. And I said: “O Eternal, Mighty One! What is this picture of the creatures?” And He said to me: “This is my will with regard to those who exist in the (divine) world-counsel,⁸ and it seemed well-pleasing before my sight, and then afterwards I gave commandment to them through my Word.⁹ And it came to pass whatever I had determined to be, was already planned beforehand in this (picture), and it stood before me ere it was created, as thou hast seen.”¹⁰

² “and between its [Leviathan’s] fins rests the middle bar of the earth” (op. cit., ibid.).

⁵ The heavenly Paradise is referred to which is to be the abode of the righteous (“those who behaved righteously”), whose fruits are “incorruptible” (4 Ezra vii. 123), wherein is “the tree of life” (Rev. ii. 7) whose “leaves are for the healing of the nations” (Rev. xxii. 2). In 2 Enoch viii. 2 the seer describes how he saw in Paradise “all the trees of beautiful colours and their fruits ripe and fragrant, and all kinds of food which they produced, springing up with delightful fragrance.” Note that Paradise is here located on the earth, though the transcendental Paradise is meant: see E.A., p. 196.

⁶ The bracketed clause is omitted (accidentally) in S.

⁷ The whole world is divided into two parts; the people of God on the right half, and the nations on the left. The latter (= the heathen) are Azazel’s portion (cf. chap. xxxi.).

⁸ Emended text (Bonwetsch); MSS. read in the light.

⁹ Note this hypostasising use of Word developed from such passages as Ps. xxxii. 6; cf. Heb. xi. 3, 2 Pet. iii. 5, 4 Ezra vi. 38.

¹⁰ The whole conception is strongly predestinarian; the whole course of creation—the rise of evil, and the coming of the righteous—is predetermined; cf. 1 Enoch xciii., cvii. 19, cvii. 1, and Charles’s note on 1 Enoch xlvi. 3. A strong expression of this idea occurs in 4 Ezra iv. 36, 37. For the “picture” of our passage we may perhaps compare the “pattern” (ὑποδείγμα) of Heb. viii. 5 (Ex. xxv. 40, xxvi. 30, Acts vii. 44). In the Rabbinical literature Israel’s election is spoken of as predestined before the creation of the world, and this idea is applied to certain other things, such as the name of the Messiah, the Torah, and repentance. In such connexions they often employ the figure of an architect and plans. One passage (Gen. rabba i.) runs: When a man erects a building, at the time when the building is erected he enlarges it as it is erected, or otherwise he enlarges it below, and contracts it above: but the Holy One . . . does not act thus, but "the heavens" (which He created) were the heavens which had ascended in (His) thought, and "the earth" (which He created) was the earth which had ascended in His thought. It was, however, the Essenes who insisted on an absolute predestination. The Rabbis, while allowing for a certain amount of predestination, emphasised man's moral freedom: "Everything is foreseen, but free will is given," as Akiba said.

And I said: "O Lord, mighty and eternal! Who are the people in this picture on this side and on that?" And He said to me: "These which are on the left side are the multitude of the peoples which have formerly been in existence and which are after thee destined,¹ some for judgement and restoration, and others for vengeance and destruction at the end of the world.² But these which are on the right side of the picture—they are the people set apart for me of the peoples with Azazel.³ These are they whom I have ordained to be born of thee and to be called My People.

XXIII. "Now look again in the picture, who it is who seduced Eve and what is the fruit of the tree, [and]⁴ thou wilt know what there shall be, and how it shall be to thy seed⁵ ⁶among the people at the end of the days of the age,⁶ and so far as thou canst not understand I will make known to thee, for thou art well-pleasing in my sight, and I will tell thee what is kept in my heart."

And I looked into the picture, and mine eyes ran to the side of the Garden of Eden. And I saw there a man very great in height and fearful in breadth, incomparable in aspect,⁷ embracing a woman, who likewise approximated to the aspect and shape of the man. And they were⁸ standing under a tree of (the Garden of) Eden, and the fruit of this tree⁹ was like the appearance of a bunch of grapes of the vine,¹⁰ and behind the tree was standing as it were a

² Of the peoples on the left side, who represent the heathen world as opposed to the Jews, some are to be spared at the final judgement, while the rest will be annihilated; cf. Ap. Bar. lxxii, 2, where it is said of the Messiah that he will summon all the nations, and some of them He will spare, and some of them He will slay. Sometimes (as in 4 Ezra xiii. 37 ff.) the whole heathen world is doomed to annihilation, and this view is very prominent in later Judaism. The idea of our text accords with the older view based upon such passages as Ps. lxxii. 11, 17; Is. lxvi. 12, 19-21 (cf. Psalms of Solomon, xvii. 34). Notice that our passage says nothing about the Messiah in this connexion.

Meir declared that the tree of which Adam ate was a vine, because the one thing that brings woe upon mankind is wine; cf. Gen. ix. 21 ("And he drank of the wine and was drunken"). So also the Greek, Ap. Bar. iv. 8 (cf. Sanh. 70a, Bereshith rabba xix. 8). The usual opinion was that the tree was a fig-tree; according to another view (Gen. rabba xi. 8) the fruit was barley; another (Samuel ben Isaac) a date. With this last agrees the varia lectio of A K here ("palm-tree").

serpent in form, having hands and feet like a man's,¹ and wings on its shoulders, six² on the right side and six² on the left,³ and they were holding the grapes of the tree⁴ in their hands,⁴ and both were eating it whom I had seen embracing.

And I said: "Who are these mutually embracing, or who is this who is between them, or what is the fruit which they are eating, O Mighty Eternal One?"

And He said: "This is⁵ the human world,⁵ this is Adam, and this is their desire upon the earth, this is Eve; but he who is between them representeth ungodliness, their beginning (on the way) to perdition, even Azazel."⁶

And I said: "O Eternal, Mighty One! Why hast Thou given to such power to destroy the generation of men in their works upon the earth?"

And He said to me: "They who will (to do) evil—and how much I hated (it) in those who do it!—over them I gave him power, and to be beloved of them."⁷

And I answered and said: "O Eternal, Mighty One! Wherefore hast Thou willed to effect that evil should be desired in the hearts of men, since Thou indeed art angered over that which was willed by Thee, at him who is doing what is unprofitable in thy counsel⁸?"

XXIV. And He said to me: "Being angered at the nations⁹ on thy account, and on account of the people of thy family who are (to be) separated after thee, as thou seest in the picture the burden (of destiny) that (is laid) upon them¹⁰—and I will tell thee what shall be, and how much shall be, in the last days. Look now at everything in the picture."

And I looked and saw there what was before me in creation; I saw Adam, and Eve existing with him, and with them the cunning Adversary,¹¹ and Cain who acted lawlessly through

³ This description really applies to Sammael (or Azazel), who had twelve wings (Pirke de R. Eliezer xiii.), and who descended and, finding the serpent skilful to do evil, mounted and rode upon it. Before its punishment by God the serpent had the appearance of a camel, according to the same authority (ibid.).

⁴ A K omit.

⁵ Lit. "council of the world," so K; A S, "light of the world." Adam (whose body is compounded of the four primal elements) is the microcosm.

⁶ Azazel plays the part elsewhere assigned to Sammael; he uses the serpent as his instrument (cf. Pirke de R. Eliezer xiii.).

⁷ In chap. xiii. (end) the wicked (as distinguished from the righteous) are spoken of as those who "follow" Azazel, and "love" what he wills. They are Azazel's "portion." A striking feature of our book is the way in which the souls and bodies of men are represented as possessed by either good or evil powers.

⁸ A K, world (which may be right). The word in S rendered counsel is an unusual one in this meaning.

⁹ A, men.

¹⁰ This apparently is the answer to the question given at the end of the previous chapter. God allows men to desire evil (with its inevitable punishment later) because of the treatment meted out by the nations to the chosen seed (Abraham and his descendants).

¹¹ Cf. 2 Cor. xi. 3 ("the serpent beguiled Eve in his craftiness").

the Adversary,¹ and the slaughtered Abel, (and) the destruction brought and caused upon him through the lawless one.² I saw there also Impurity,³ and those who lust after it, and its pollution, and their jealousy, and the fire of their corruption in the lowest parts of the earth. I saw there Theft, and those who hasten after it, and the arrangement [of their retribution, the judgement of the Great Assize].⁴ I saw there⁵ naked men, the foreheads against each other, and their disgrace, and their passion which (they had) against each other, and their retribution. I saw there Desire, and in her hand the head of every kind of lawlessness [and her scorn and her waste assigned to perdition].⁶

XXV. I saw there the likeness of the idol of jealousy,⁷ having the likeness of woodwork such as my father was wont to make, and its statue⁸ was of glittering bronze; and before it a man, and he worshipped it; and in front of him an altar, and upon it a boy slain in the presence of the idol.

But I said to Him: “What is this idol, or what is the altar, or ⁹who are they that are sacrificed,⁹ or who is the sacrificer? Or what is the Temple which I see that is beautiful in art, and its beauty (being like) the glory that lieth beneath Thy¹⁰ throne?”

And He said: “Hear, Abraham. This which thou seest, the Temple and altar and beauty, is my idea of the priesthood of my glorious Name, in which dwelleth every single prayer of man, and the rise of kings and prophets, and whatever sacrifice I ordain to be offered to me among my people who are to come out of thy generation.¹¹ But the statue which thou sawest is mine anger¹² wherewith the people¹³ anger me who are to proceed for me from thee. But the man

² In Ep. Barnabas xv. 5 the Devil is called “the Lawless One” (ὁ ἄνομος): when His Son shall come, and shall abolish the time of the Lawless One (cf. also 2 Thess. ii. 8).

⁴ The bracketed clause is missing in S.

⁵ A, also (instead of there).

⁷ Cf. Ezek. viii. 3, 5.

⁸ Or body.

⁹ K, who is the sacrificed one.

¹⁰ S, my (a scribal mistake?).

¹¹ The whole sacrificial system and the Levitical cultus are of divine origin, and embody the divine ideal. The “rise of kings and prophets” is apparently involved in it as a subordinate development from it. The tone of the passage is reminiscent rather of Jubilees. In apocalyptic literature such allusions to the cultus are rare.

¹² “The image of jealousy” is correctly explained here as meaning the image which provokes God’s jealousy or anger. Idolatrous practices in Israel are referred to.

¹³ K omits the people.

whom thou sawest slaughtering—that is he who inciteth murderous sacrifices,¹ of (sic) which are a witness² to me of the final judgement, even at the beginning of creation.”

Why Sin is permitted (Chapter XXVI).

XXVI. And I said: “O Eternal, Mighty One! Wherefore hast Thou established³ that it should be so, and then proclaim the knowledge thereof?”

And He said to me: “Hear, Abraham; understand what I say to thee, and answer me as⁴ I question thee. Why did thy father Terah not listen to thy voice, and (why) did he not cease from the devilish idolatry until he perished [and]⁵ his whole household with him?”

And I said: “O Eternal, [Mighty One]!⁵ (It was) entirely because he did not choose to listen to me; but I, too, did not follow his works.”

And He said [to me]:⁶ “Hear, Abraham. As the counsel⁷ of thy father is in him, and as thy counsel is in thee, so also is the counsel of my will in me ready for the coming days, before thou hast knowledge of these,⁸ or (canst) see with thine eyes what is future in them. How those of thy seed will be, look in the picture.”

A Vision of Judgement and Salvation (Chapter XXVII).

XXVII. And I looked and saw: lo! the picture swayed and [from it]⁹ emerged, on its left side,¹⁰ a heathen people, and they pillaged those who were on the right side, men and women and children: [some they slaughtered,]⁹ others they retained with themselves.¹¹ Lo! I saw them run towards them through four entrances,¹² and they burnt the Temple with

⁵ S omits. ⁶ S omits. ⁷ i. e. “will.”

⁸ God’s will is free, but so also is man’s. The argument is interesting. From the fact, proved by the two contrary instances of Terah and Abraham, that man’s will is free, the writer justifies God’s freedom to permit sin, hinting, however, that the future will still further justify the divine counsel. The vision that follows (chap. xxvii.) serves to illustrate this.

⁹ Omitted by S.

¹¹ Sc. in slavery.

¹² So A K; S (schody), descents (= ? “generations”). The four “entrances” or “descents” by which the heathen make inroads upon the chosen people apparently correspond to the four hundred years of slavery for Israel predicted by God to Abraham in the vision of Gen. xv. (cf. vs. 13). This was interpreted by our apocalypticist, in accordance with current tradition, to refer to Israel’s captivity and subjection by the four oppressive world-powers of the Book of Daniel, understood to be Babylon, Media, Greece, and Rome (cf. chap. ix. above, note¹¹): thus the Palestinian Targum to Gen. xv. 13 runs: And behold, Abram saw four kingdoms which should arise to bring his sons into subjection. It is important to remember that the fourth “entrance” here corresponds to the Roman Empire [cf. also Pirke de R. Eliezer xxviii.]. Possibly “descent” (S) is the right reading here, and means “generation,” a generation being roughly reckoned as equivalent to a hundred years: Heb. דור.

fire, and the holy things that were therein they plundered.¹

And I said: “O Eternal One! Lo! the people (that spring) from me, whom Thou hast accepted, the hordes of the heathen do plunder, and some they kill, while others they hold fast as aliens,² and the Temple they have burnt with fire, and the beautiful things therein they do rob [and destroy].³ O Eternal, Mighty One! If this be so, wherefore hast Thou now⁴ lacerated⁵ my heart, and why should this be so?”

And He said to me: “Hear, Abraham. What⁶ ⁷thou hast seen⁷ shall happen on account of thy seed who anger me by reason of the statue which thou sawest, and on account of the human slaughter in the picture, through zeal in the Temple;⁸ and as thou sawest ⁹so shall it be.”⁹

And I said: “O Eternal, Mighty One! May the works of evil (wrought) in ungodliness now pass by, but¹⁰ (show me)¹¹ rather those who fulfilled the commandments, even the works of his (?)¹² righteousness. For thou canst do this.”

And He said to me: “The time of the righteous meeteth [them]¹³ first through¹⁴ the holiness (flowing) from kings¹⁵ and righteous-dealing rulers whom I at first created in order from such to rule among them.¹⁵ But from these issue men who care for their interests,¹⁶ as I have made known to thee and thou hast seen.”

How long? (Chapters XXVIII.-XXIX.).

XXVIII. And I answered and said: “O Mighty, [Eternal One],¹⁷ hallowed by Thy power! Be favourable to my petition, [for for this hast Thou brought me up here—and shew me].¹⁸ As Thou hast brought me up to Thy height, so make [this]¹⁷ known to me, Thy beloved one, as much as I ask—whether what I saw shall happen to them for long?”¹⁹

² Of those who were not killed in the Roman war, some were reserved for the victor's triumph, some for the arena, and the rest were sold as slaves; cf. Josephus, War, vi. 9, 2 f.

¹⁶ Lit. “for them” (= ? “for themselves”)—from the righteous rulers spring sons who are faithless to their heritage (such as Manasseh). The sentence is obscure, and the meaning uncertain.

¹⁷ S omits.

¹⁸ Omitted accidentally in S (by homoioteleuton, “brought up . . . brought up”).

¹⁹ Cf. 4 Ezra iv. 33 ff.

And He showed me a multitude of His people, and said to me: “On their account through four issues,¹ as thou sawest, I shall be provoked by them, and in these² my retribution for their deeds shall be (accomplished). But in the fourth outgoing³ of a hundred years⁴ and one hour of the age—the same is a hundred years⁵—it shall be in misfortune among the heathen [but one hour in mercy and contumely, as among the heathen].”⁶

XXIX. And I said: “O Eternal [Mighty One]!⁷ And how long a time is an hour of the Age?”⁸

And He said: “Twelve years⁹ have I ordained of this ungodly Age¹⁰ to rule among the heathen and in thy seed; and until the end of the times it shall be as thou sawest. ¹¹*And do thou reckon and understand and look into the picture.*”

⁴ i. e. in the fourth generation (cf. Gen. xv. 16).

⁵ In chap. xxx. the coming of the ten plagues on the heathen world is placed “at the passing over of the twelfth hour”; then follows (chap. xxxi.) the Messianic salvation. Apparently the present age is reckoned as enduring for twelve hours (each hour = 100 years), i. e. one day (cf. John xi. 9). The apocalyptic writer may possibly reckon this day as beginning with the founding of the Holy City by David (cf. 4 Ezra x. 46) and culminating in the destruction of the last Temple by Titus, which calamity was to be followed by the period of woes described in chap. xxx., these bringing the present age (or æon) to a close. Now according to Josephus (War, vi. 10) the period from David’s reign in Jerusalem to the destruction of the Temple by Titus amounted to 1179 years. If we suppose the seer to be writing at the close of the first or in the early years of the second century A.D. the period would include about 1200 years. Like all the apocalyptists he obviously supposes himself to be standing on the brink of the new age. Perhaps in the text above “and one hour of the Age” is intended to synchronise with the “fourth out-going of a hundred years.” [In Pirke de R. Eliezer xxviii. a dictum ascribed to R. Elazar ben Azariah runs: (from Gen. xv.) thou mayest learn that the rule of these four kingdoms will only last one day, according to the Day of the Lord (= 1000 years).]

⁶ The bracketed clause is attested by A K, but not by S. It may be an addition to the text. Contumely can hardly be right. Perhaps there was an error in the Greek text from which the Slavonic Version was made; ? τῆμῃ misread ἀτιμῖα; read, then, “in mercy and honour.”

⁷ S omits.

⁹ ? Read hours for years. We may compare 4 Ezra xiv. 11 (“For the world-age is divided into twelve parts”), and the cloud and water vision in Ap. Bar. liii. f., where a similar division appears. If “years” be kept, each year will probably stand for a generation (reckoned at 100 years?); cf. 4 Ezra x. 45 (3000 years = 30 generations).

¹⁰ The present age is the age of ungodliness, where the organised forces of evil are dominant; cf. 1 Enoch xlvi. 7 (“the world of unrighteousness”), 4 Ezra iv. 29 f.

¹¹ The passage printed in italic type that follows can only be regarded as a Christian interpolation (probably a Jewish-Christian one).

And I [looked and]¹ saw a man going out from the left side of the heathen;² and there went out men and women and children, from the side of the heathen, many hosts, and worshipped him.³ And while I still looked there came out from the right side⁴ (many), and some insulted that man, while some struck him⁵; others, however, worshipped him. [And]¹ I saw how these worshipped him, and Azazel ran and worshipped him, and having kissed his face he turned and stood behind him.⁶

And I said: “O Eternal, Mighty One! Who is the man insulted and beaten, who is worshipped by the heathen with Azazel?”

And He answered and said: “Hear, Abraham! The man whom thou sawest insulted and beaten and again worshipped—that is the relief⁷ (granted) by the heathen to the people who proceed from thee, in the last days,⁸ in this twelfth hour⁹ of the Age of ungodliness. But in the twelfth year⁹ of my final Age¹⁰ I will set up this man from thy generation, whom thou sawest (issue) from my people; this one all will follow,¹¹ and such as are called by me¹² (will) join, (even)

² The man is clearly intended to be Jesus. His emerging “from the left side of the heathen” is curious. If the text is in order it must apparently refer to the emergence into prominence of the Early Christian Church in the Gentile world. It clearly cannot refer to racial origin, for it is stated further on in the chapter that “the man” sprang from Abraham’s “generation” and God’s people. But in view of the definite statement below—this man from thy generation whom thou sawest (issue) from my people—it is better to suppose that the text here is out of order: read? from the right side and omit of the heathen as an incorrect gloss.

³ i. e. His followers are to include large numbers from the Gentile world.

⁴ i. e. from the Jewish world.

⁵ Cf. Is. liii. 3.

⁶ The worship of Christ by the Devil (Azazel) is a striking feature in this representation. It is difficult to determine its exact significance here. Does it reflect the Jewish-Christian feeling that the access of so large a part of the heathen world to Christianity endangered the purity of the new faith by inevitably bringing in its train a large admixture of heathenism? It can hardly mean that Azazel had been truly converted. Indeed, his homage is significantly depicted as lip-homage (“kissed his face”; cf. the treacherous kiss of Judas). Perhaps the real meaning is that the kingdom of evil, and the Satanic powers, have been vanquished by Christ (cf. Luke x. 18, Phil. ii. 9, 10, Col. ii. 15, Ephes. i. 21 f.). The homage of Azazel—the head of the unredeemed heathen world—marked the triumph of Christ.

⁷ = ἄνεσις (= Heb. mēnuhā).

⁸ What is meant by the relief (granted) by the heathen to the people who proceed from thee, in the last days? The expression is difficult and obscure. Perhaps the “relief” spoken of means the mitigation of the process of “hardening” that has taken place in Israel (by its rejection of Jesus), which is brought about by the adhesion of some (a remnant) in Israel to the new faith, in conjunction with the great numbers who are streaming in from the Gentile world; cf. Rom. xi., especially xi. 25 (“a hardening in part hath befallen Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in and all Israel shall be saved,” and vs. 29-30: “For as ye in time past were disobedient . . . but now have obtained mercy by their disobedience, even so have these also now been disobedient that by the mercy shewn to you they also may obtain mercy”).

those who change in their counsels.¹ And those whom thou sawest emerge from the left side of the picture—the meaning is:² There shall be many from the heathen who set their hopes upon him;³ and as for those whom thou sawest from thy seed on the right side, some insulting and striking, others worshipping him—many of them shall be offended at him.⁴ He, however, is testing⁵ those who have worshipped him of thy seed, in that twelfth hour of the End,⁶ with a view to shortening the Age of ungodliness.⁷

“Before the Age of the righteous beginneth to grow,⁸ my judgement shall come upon the lawless heathen through the people of thy seed⁹ who have been separated for me. In those days I will bring upon all creatures of the earth ten plagues,¹⁰ through misfortune and disease and sighing of the grief of their soul. Thus much will I bring upon the generations of men that be upon it on account of the provocation and the corruption of its creatures,¹¹ whereby they provoke me. And then shall righteous men of thy seed be left¹² in the number which is kept

³ Cf. Is. xi. 10 (“unto him shall the nations seek”), Matt. xii. 21, Rom. xv. 12.

⁴ Cf. Matt. xi. 6, John vi. 66, Rom. xi. 8, etc.

⁵ Cf. Rev. iii. 10 (“the season of trial that is coming upon the whole habitable earth”). The time of “trial” or “testing” referred to is, no doubt, the period of the Messianic woes which precedes the advent of the new age.

⁶ i. e. the time immediately preceding the End of the present Age.

⁷ Cf. Matt. xxiv. 22, Ep. Barnabas iv. 3, Ap. Bar. xx. 2 (“Therefore have I now taken away Sion in order that I may the more speedily visit the world in its season”). In the latter passage the fall of Jerusalem is regarded as hastening the End. Impatient longing for the End is characteristic of the Apocalyptists; see e. g. 4 Ezra iv. 33 ff.

⁸ The coming Age is the “Age of the righteous” (for the expression cf. also chap. xvii. of our Book); it has been “prepared” for them (4 Ezra viii. 52), and they will inherit it (4 Ezra vii. 17). For the metaphor of growth in this connexion cf. 4 Ezra iv. 29, 35; the community of the righteous has already been “sown” (1 Enoch lxii. 8; cf. also 1 Enoch x. 16, “the plant of righteousness will appear”), but its full growth will only become visible after the judgement.

⁹ Judgement on the heathen will be executed by the agency of Israel itself; cf. 1 Enoch xc. 19. In the Midrash rabba on Ruth ii. 19 a saying ascribed to R. Eliezer b. Jacob runs: “Vengeance on the nations of the world is in the hands of the Israelites (Ezek. xxv. 14).”

¹⁰ A saying handed down in the name of R. Eleazar b. Pedath runs: “Just as the Holy One . . . brought (plagues) upon Egypt He will bring (plagues) upon this (wicked) nation [i. e. Rome], as it is said [Is. xxiii. 5]: ‘As at the report from Egypt so shall they be pained at the report of Sov’” (read Sār “adversary,” which is to be understood as meaning “Rome”): see Midrash Tanhuma, ed. Buber, ii. 30; Bacher, Pal. Amovāer ii. 87. For a description of the plagues see the next chapter.

“And of those who defamed them they shall spit in the face, scorned by Me, while they (the righteous) shall behold Me full of joy, rejoicing with My people, and receiving those who return to Me⁸ [in repentance].⁹

And [hear]⁹ what thou hast heard,
And [take full knowledge of]⁹ what thou hast come to know.

XXX. But while He was still speaking, I found myself upon the earth. And I said: “O Eternal, [Mighty One],¹¹ I am no longer in the glory in which I was (while) on high, and what my soul longed to understand in mine heart I do not understand.”

¹ The number of the elect righteous is pre-determined. This idea recurs in more than one form in Apocalyptic. Here apparently what is meant is that the number of elect righteous who shall survive the Messianic woes has been fixed beforehand, and is a secret known only to God. These living righteous shall enjoy the blessedness of the new Age upon the renovated earth (in Jerusalem). Nothing is said about the resurrection of the righteous dead to share in this felicity. In chap. xxi. the latter enjoy a blessed existence in the heavenly Paradise. Our Book apparently knows nothing of a resurrection. On the other hand, in Rev. vi. 11 it is the number of the righteous dead (the martyrs) that is predetermined. Another application of the same idea is to the whole number of mankind who are to be born, which is predetermined; cf. Ap. Bar. xxiii. 4. For those who survive the period of calamity, and share in the bliss of the new Age, see 4 Ezra vi. 25, vii. 27, ix. 7 f., Ap. Bar. xxix. 2; but in none of these passages is their number said to have been fixed beforehand.

³ A K, to.

⁴ By the place prepared beforehand (cf. Rev. xii. 6) is here meant Jerusalem (which thou sawest devastated in the picture), presumably the renovated city on a renovated earth. The expression place prepared beforehand certainly suggests the heavenly Jerusalem (cf. Ap. Bar. iv. 2-6), which according to Rev. xxi. 2, 9 f. is to descend from heaven upon the renovated earth. But this is not certain. Our Book may contemplate nothing more than the earthly Jerusalem transformed and glorified.

⁶ With the restoration of the cultus the righteous will enjoy the privilege of seeing God’s glory continually.

⁷ Cf. Jubilees xxiii. 30 and see note⁹ p. 80.

And He said to me: “What is desired in thine¹ heart I will tell thee, because thou hast sought to see the ten plagues which I have prepared for the heathen, and have prepared beforehand² at the passing over of the twelfth hour³ of the earth. Hear what I divulge to thee, so shall it come to pass:⁴ the first⁵ (is) pain of great distress;⁶ the second, conflagration of many cities;⁷ the third, destruction and pestilence of animals⁸; the fourth, hunger of the whole world and of its people⁹; the fifth by destruction among its rulers,¹⁰ destruction by earthquake¹¹ and the sword; the sixth, multiplication of hail and snow;¹² the seventh, the wild beasts will be their grave; the eighth, hunger and pestilence will alternate with their destruction; the ninth, punishment by the sword and flight¹³ in distress; the tenth, ¹⁴thunder and voices¹⁴ and destructive earthquake.¹⁵

² These also have been pre-determined.

³ i.e. the last hour of the present Age.

⁴ It is God’s property to announce beforehand what is to occur and then to bring it to pass; cf. Justin Martyr, Apology i. 14 (end): For this . . . is the work of God to declare a thing shall come to be long before it is in being, and then to bring about that thing to pass according to the same declaration. Cf. also 4 Ezra ix. 6 (Gunkel’s rendering of the “times of the Most High”): their beginning is in word (i. e. the prophetic word) and portents, but their end in deeds and marvels.

⁵ The ten “plagues” here enumerated mark the distressful period which precedes the advent of the new Age; they correspond to the “signs” which are a common feature in the traditional eschatology; cf. 4 Ezra iv. 52-v. 13, vi. 13-28, ix. 1-6, xiii. 16 ff., Ap. Bar. xxv.-xxvii., xlvi. 30-38, lxx., 1 Enoch xcix. 4 f., 7-10, c. 1-6 (Dan. xii.). The first of the Ezra passages just cited affords a good example of the contents of these descriptions. It depicts a time of commotions, and the general break-up of moral and religious forces; the heathen world-power (i. e. Rome) will be destroyed; there will be portents in nature, general chaos in society; monstrous and untimely births, the failure of the means of subsistence, and internecine strife; and wisdom and understanding will have perished from the earth. With our passage depicting ten plagues may be compared T.B. Sanh. 97a, which divides the period into seven years; in the first there will be rain on one city and no rain on another (cf. Amos iv. 7); in the second arrows of famine; in the third a great famine in which men, women, and children and pious will perish, and the Torah will be forgotten; in the fourth abundance and dearth; in the fifth great abundance, the people will eat and drink, and the Torah will return; in the sixth voices announcing the coming of the Messiah; in the seventh war, and at its end Messiah ben David will come. In the New Testament, besides the Apocalyptic passage in Matt. xxiv. 8-31 and parallels, there is a marked parallelism with the Apocalypse of the seven trumpets (Rev. viii. 6-ix. 21, x. 7, xi. 14-19), six of which mark partial judgements, while the seventh ushers in the final judgement. Several of the “trumpets” announce judgements like the Egyptian plagues.

⁷ The fall of fire is one of the portents of the End in Ap. Bar. xxvii. 10; cf. the fiery hail of the seventh Egyptian plague (Ex. ix. 23 f.) and the “first trumpet” (Rev. viii. 6-7); cf. also Rev. xi. 19b (“great hail”).

“And I will give those who have covered me with mockery to the scorn of the coming Age;⁹ and I have prepared them to be food¹⁰ for the fire of Hades and for ceaseless flight to and fro through the air in the underworld beneath the earth¹¹ [the body filled with worms.¹² For on them shall they see the righteousness of the Creator—those, namely, who have chosen to do my will, and those who have openly kept my¹³ commandments,¹⁴ (and) they shall rejoice with joy over the

² This title of the Messiah is a favourite one in the “Similitudes” of 1 Enoch; cf. 1 Enoch xlvi. 9, lv. 4, etc. It recurs as a Messianic title in Luke ix. 35, xxiii. 35, and goes back to Is. xlii. 1.

⁴ Note that it is the Messiah here who summons the outcast Israelites from the nations (so also Ps. Sol. xvii. 28, Matt. xxiv. 31, 4 Ezra xiii. 39). More usually this is performed by God Himself (cf. the prayer cited in note¹ above).

⁵ Cf. Is. lx. 4.

⁶ Punishment of the godless by fire at God’s hands is a common feature in the eschatology. It is the fire of the divine anger that is thought of, and is based upon Mal. iv. 1 (iii. 19); cf. the “fiery stream” and “flaming breath” which the Messiah emits from his mouth to destroy his enemies in 4 Ezra xiii. 10 (interpreted figuratively in verses 36 f.). A adds through him (after I will), i. e. through the Messiah; K, through them.

⁷ i. e. the heathen nations.

⁸ i. e. “over.” Cf. Ap. Bar. lxxii. 6 (“But all those who have ruled over you . . . shall be given to the sword”).

⁹ Those who have scorned shall be scorned; cf. Wisdom iv. 18, Dan. xii. 2, Ps. Sol. ii. 32 f. (“the coming Age” is the Age of the righteous). Possibly renegade Jews are referred to, and are the subject of the remaining part of this chapter.

¹⁰ Cf. Mal. iv. I (iii. 19).

¹¹ Here two conceptions seem to be mixed; there is (1) the idea of “the fire of Hades” (or Hell), which is located beneath the earth (for “Hades” = Hell in this sense: cf. Ps. Sol. xv. 11); this fire consumes their bodies; (2) combined with this is the idea of wandering (flying) restlessly about (properly in the air or outer darkness); cf. 4 Ezra vii. 80. In T. B. Shabb. 152b the souls of the wicked are said to be given no place of rest till the judgement. Here (at the word earth) S ends. The rest of the text (printed in small type) is found both in A and K.

¹² In Judith xvi. 17 “fire and worms” await the heathen enemies of Israel; cf. Ecclus. vii. 17, 1 Enoch xlvi. 6 (“darkness will be their dwelling and worms their bed”), Is. lxvi. 24. Here renegade Jews are probably meant.

downfall of the men who still remain, who have followed the idols and their murders.¹ For they shall putrefy in the body of the evil worm Azazel,² and be burnt with the fire of Azazel's tongue;³ for I hoped that they would come to me,⁴ and not have loved and praised the strange (god),⁵ and not have adhered to him for whom they were not allotted,⁶ but (instead) they have forsaken the mighty Lord."

Conclusion (Chapter XXXII.)

XXXII. "Therefore hear, O Abraham, and see; lo! thy seventh generation ⁷ (shall) go with thee, and they shall go out into a strange land, and they shall enslave them, and evil-entreat them⁸ as it were an hour of the Age of ungodliness⁹ but the nation whom they shall serve I will judge."]¹⁰

ADDITIONAL NOTES

I

I am he who hath been commanded to loosen Hades to destroy him who stareth at the dead.

This obscure clause, which occurs in Jaobel's speech in chap. x., is absent from S. The Slavonic text runs as follows—

Az esm' povelěvy razreshiti ada, istliti divyaščas mertvym.

Dr. St. Clair Tisdall suggests the following rendering—

I am commanded to loosen Hades, to turn to corruption (by) gazing at the dead.

¹ The renegade Jews here referred to are described as idolaters (cf. Ezek. xx. 16, Jer. vii. 9); and the righteous rejoice over their "downfall"; cf. 1 Enoch lvi. 8 ("Sheol will devour the sinners in the presence of the elect"), xciv. 10 ("Your creator will rejoice at your destruction"), xcvi. 2 ("the angels rejoice" over it), Is. lxvi. 24. Notice that idolatry and murder are here conjoined; cf. Acts xv. 29 (according to one view of the text).

² Cf. the Greek Apocalypse of Baruch iv. (the dragon of Hades, which devours the bodies of the ungodly). In 2 Enoch xlii. 1 the guardians of the gates of Hell are said to be "like great serpents."

³ Here the Evil Spirit is identified with Hell; his tongue devours the ungodly; and he himself is "the burning coal of the furnace of the earth" (chap. xiv.). Hell (Gehenna) is essentially a place of fire; cf. Is. xxx. 33 and Mekilta to Ex. xiv. 21.

⁵ i. e. probably Azazel.

⁶ This clearly indicates that renegade Jews are referred to. For a similar reference cf. 4 Ezra viii. 25-31. It would appear that large numbers of Jews had lapsed, after the fall of Jerusalem, into indifference, or even open apostasy; cf. the Rabbinical references to "the people of the land" (am hā-'āres).

⁷ Including Abraham, the seven generations may be reckoned thus: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Levi, Kohath, Amram, Moses.

⁸ Cf. Gen. xv. 13.

⁹ i. e. ? 100 years; cf. chap. xxviii, end.

¹⁰ Cf. Gen. xv. 14. K concludes with the following words: And this, too, said the Lord: Hast thou heard, Abraham, what I have announced to thee, what shall befall thy people in the latter days? And Abraham heard the words of the Lord, and received them into his heart.

Dr. Tisdall explains the meaning thus: "The speaker has power given to him to 'deliver over to corruption' the bodies of the dead by gazing at them. The verb [rendered 'gazing'] strictly denotes marvelling, admiring."

Mr. Landsman writes as follows: "The verb diviyati is used in Slavonic, meaning 'to be ferocious,' 'to rage'; divyaščas means thus 'to stare at' somebody in such a way that he is frightened by the ferocity of the look. It can be translated as Dr. Tisdall translates it, but does this rendering and interpretation harmonise with the context?" Mr. Landsman goes on to suggest that the second line refers to Death personified; cf. Ps. xlix. 14 ("Death shall be their shepherd") and Rev. xx. 13, 14, where "Death and Hades" are "cast into the lake of fire." Then render—

I am he who hath been commanded to loosen Hades, to destroy him [i.e. Death] who terrifieth the dead.

This yields an admirable sense, and is probably right. Jaol thus claims to be commissioned to abolish the terrors of Hades and Death.

II

And when they [the Cherubim] had ended the singing, they looked at one another and threatened one another. And it came to pass when the angel who was with me saw that they were threatening each other, he left me and went running to them, and turned the countenance of each living creature from the countenance immediately confronting him in order that they might not see their countenances threatening each other. And he taught them the song of peace which hath its origin in the Eternal One (chap. xviii.).

In addition to the illustration given in note¹⁰ (p. 40) on this passage, the following extract from The Revelation of Moses (Gedulath Moshe), translated by Dr. Garter in The Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for July 1893, p. 576 ("Hebrew Visions of Hell and Paradise") may be quoted—

Moses went to the fifth heaven, and he saw there troops of angels, half of fire and half of snow; and the snow is above the fire without extinguishing it, for God maketh peace between them [as it is said: "He maketh peace in his high places," Job xxv. 2], and all praise the Almighty. Cf also the Midrash Debarim rabba (to Deut. xx. 10), where with reference to the same passage of Job (xxv. 2) it is said: Michael [who presides over the water] is altogether snow, Gabriel is altogether fire, and they stand next each other without being harmed on either side (so also Midrash rabba to Cant. iii. 11); cf. also 2 Enoch xxix. 2.

APPENDIX I

THE LEGEND OF ABRAM'S CONVERSION FROM IDOLATRY

(Cf. Chapters I.-VIII. of our Book.)

ABRAM'S emergence from the prevalent idolatry early became the theme of legend, which has assumed various forms and was widespread. These are collected, with full references, in Beer's Leben Abrahams (Leipzig, 1859), Chaps. I. and II., and are well summarised in J.E. I. 84-87 ("Abraham in apocryphal and Rabbinical Literature").

The earliest literary evidence appears to be some extracts from Jewish Alexandrine works cited by Josephus under the names of Hecataeus and Berosus, of the third and second centuries B.C., and summarised by him (Ant. I. 1, 7): [Abraham] was a person of great sagacity both for understanding all things and persuading his hearers, and not mistaken in his opinions; for which reason he began to have higher notions of virtue than others had, and he determined to renew and to change the opinion all men happened then to have concerning God; for he was the first that ventured to publish this notion, that there was but one God, the Creator of the Universe; and that as to other [gods] if they contributed anything to the happiness of men, that each of them afforded it only according to his appointment, and not by their own power. This his opinion was derived from the irregular phenomena that were visible both on land and sea, as well as those that happen to the sun, and moon, and all the heavenly bodies, thus: "If [said he] these bodies had power of their own, they would certainly take care of their own regular motions; but since they do not preserve such regularity, they make it plain, that so far as they co-operate to our advantage, they do it not of their own abilities, but as they are subservient to him that commands them, to whom alone we ought justly to offer our honour and thanksgiving." For which doctrines, when the Chaldeans and other peoples of Mesopotamia raised a tumult against him, he thought fit to leave that country; and at the command, and by the assistance of God, he came and lived in the land of Canaan.

Another early attestation of the legend occurs in The Book of Jubilees, probably dating from the close of the second century B. C. Here it is related (chap. xi. 16-xii) that Abraham as a child "began to understand the errors of the earth," and at the age of fourteen, in order not to be entangled in the idolatry, practised in connexion with astrology by the whole house of Nahor, separated from his father and family, and prayed to God to save him "from the errors of the children of men." He became an inventor of an improved method of sowing seed, by which it was preserved against the depredations of the ravens. He then made efforts to wean his father from idolatry, but Terah, though acknowledging that his son was right, was afraid to make a public renunciation, and told Abraham to keep silent. Being no more successful with his brothers, Abraham rose by night and set fire to the house of idols. His brother Haran in an attempt to save them perished in the fire, and was buried in Ur of the Chaldees.

Here we meet with a feature which provided a motif for various forms of the legend—viz. the fire which burnt the idols and their house. This is really derived from the etymological meaning of Ur = "fire;" thus "Ur of the Chaldees" is taken to mean "fire of the Chaldees." In our Book the fire descends from heaven and burns the house and all in it (including Terah), Abraham alone escaping. In other forms of the legend Abraham is cast into the fire (by Nimrod), and is miraculously preserved. Philo's account of Abraham's conversion (de

Abrahamo, § 15) is as follows:¹

The Chaldæans were, above all nations, addicted to the study of astronomy, and attributed all events to the motions of the stars by which they fancied that all the things in the world were regulated, and accordingly they magnified the visible essence by the powers which numbers and the analogies of numbers contain, taking no account of the invisible essence appreciable only by the intellect. But while they were busied in investigating the arrangement existing in them with reference to the periodical revolutions of the sun and moon and the other planets and fixed-stars, and the changes of the seasons of the year, and the sympathy of the heavenly bodies with the things of earth, they were led to imagine that the world itself was God, in their impious philosophy comparing the creature to the Creator.

The man [Abraham] who had been bred up in this doctrine, and who for a long time had studied the philosophy of the Chaldæans, as if suddenly awaking from a deep slumber and opening the eye of the soul, and beginning to perceive a pure ray of light instead of profound darkness, followed the light, and saw what he had never seen before, a certain governor and director of the world standing above it (κατεῖδεν . . . τοῦ κόσμου τινὰ ἡνιόχον καὶ κυβερνήτην ἐφεστῶτα), and guiding his own work in a salutary manner, and exerting his care and power in behalf of those parts of it which are worthy of divine superintendence.

The legend is cited or referred to in many places in the Rabbinical Literature. The following extract from Bereshith rabba xxxviii. 19 (on Gen. xi. 28) is a good example:

*And Haran died in the presence of his father Terah. R. Hiyya bar R. Idi of Joppa said: "Terah was a maker and seller of idols. On one occasion he went out somewhere, (and) set Abraham to sell in his place. A man came (and) wished to buy (an idol), and he (Abraham) said to him: 'How old art thou?' And he said: 'Fifty or sixty years.' [Abraham] said to him: 'Woe to the man who is sixty years old, and will worship (an image) a day old!' And (the buyer) was shamed and went his way. Another time there came a woman, carrying in her hand a dish of fine flour. 'Here thou art,' said she. 'Offer it (as an oblation) before them (i. e. before the gods).' [Abraham] arose, took a club in his hand, and smashed all the images, and placed the club in the hand of the largest of them. When his father came back, he said to him: 'Who has done this to them?' He [Abraham] said to him: 'Why should I hide (the matter) from thee? A woman came carrying a dish of fine flour. And she said to me: "Here thou art: offer it (as an oblation) before them." I offered (it) before them. Then one said: "I will eat first," and another said: "I will eat first." The one who was greatest among them rose up, took a club, and smashed them.' And [Terah] said to him: 'Why wilt thou fool me? How should they understand (anything)?' [Abraham] said to him: 'Let not thy ears hear what thy mouth says!' [Terah] took him and delivered him to Nimrod. The latter said to him: 'We will worship the fire.' Abraham said to him: 'But we should (rather) worship water.' Nimrod said to him: 'We will worship the water.' [Abraham] said to him: 'If so, we ought to worship the cloud that bears the water.' Nimrod said to him: ['We will worship] the cloud.' He replied to him: 'If so, we ought to worship the wind: it scatters the cloud.' [Nimrod] said to him: ['We should worship] the wind.' He replied: 'We should worship man, who endures, (defies) the wind.' He replied: 'You are bandying words with me: I worship the fire only, (and) lo, I will cast thee into the midst of it; then, let the God whom thou worshipping come and deliver thee from it.' Haran was standing there in doubt. He said: 'At all events if Abraham is victorious I will say I am of Abraham's opinion; but if Nimrod is victorious I will say I am of Nimrod's opinion.' When Abraham descended into the fiery furnace and was delivered, they said to him: 'On whose side art thou?' He said to them: 'Abraham's.' They seized him and threw him into the fire. And his bowels were scorched, and it fell out that he died in the presence of his father. That is the meaning of the verse, and Haran died in the presence of Terah his father."*

Another version of the same legend (cf. Tanna debe Eliyaha ii. 25, and see J.E. i. 86) runs as follows:

Terah was a manufacturer of idols and had them for sale. One day when Abraham was left in charge of the shop, an old man came to buy an idol. Abraham handed him one on the top, and he paid the price asked. "How old art thou?" Abraham asked. "Seventy years," he replied. "Thou fool," said Abraham; "how canst thou adore a god so much younger than thyself? Thou wert born seventy years ago, and this god was made yesterday." The buyer threw away the idol and received his money back. The other sons of Terah complained to their father that Abraham did not know how to sell the idols, and it was arranged that he should act as priest to the latter. One day a woman brought a meal-offering for the idols, and as they would not eat he exclaimed: A mouth have they but speak not, eyes have they but see not, ears but hear not, hands but handle not. May their makers be like them, and all who trust in them (Ps. cxv. 5-8); and he broke them in pieces, and burned them. Abraham was thereupon brought before Nimrod, who said: "Knowest thou not that I am god, and ruler of the world? Why hast thou destroyed my images?" Abraham replied: "If thou art god and ruler of the world, why dost thou not cause the sun to rise in the west and set in the east? If thou art god and ruler of the world, tell me all that I have now at heart, and what I shall do in the future?" Nimrod was dumbfounded, and Abraham continued: "Thou art the son of Cush, a mortal man. Thou couldst not save thy father from death, nor wilt thou thyself escape it."

Another form of the legend, after narrating the wonderful nature of Abraham's birth, Nimrod's alarm at the report of the astrologers and magicians in connexion therewith, and his attempt to bribe Terah to give up the child, who, under the charge of a nurse, was hidden by his father in a cave, where he remained for some years, proceeds (cf. Midrash hagadol on Genesis. ed. Schechter p. 189 f.):

When Abraham came forth from the cave, his mind was inquiring into the creation of the world, and he was intent upon all the luminaries of the world, to bow down to them and serve them, in order that he might know which of them was God. He saw the moon, whose light shone in the night from one end of the world to the other, and whose retinue [of shining stars] was so numerous. Said he: "This is God!" (and) he worshipped her all the night. But when at day-break he saw the sun-rise, and at its rising the moon become dark and her strength wane, he said: "The light of the moon only proceeds from the light of the sun, and the world is only sustained by the light of the sun," and so he worshipped the sun all day. At evening the sun set, and its power waned, and the moon and the stars and the constellations emerged (once more). Said [Abraham]: "Verily there is a Lord and a God over these."

A peculiar form of the legend occurs in the Biblical Antiquities of Pseudo-Philo vi. 5-18.¹

According to this Midrashic account, Abram with eleven other men whose names are given, refused to bake bricks for the building of the Tower of Babel. In consequence, they were seized by the people of the land, and brought before the princes, and on their persistent refusal to take any part in the building of the Tower, were condemned to be burnt. A respite of seven days is given them at the intercession of Jectan, "the first prince of the captains," but at the end of this time, if they have not already changed their mind, they are to be handed over for execution. Jectan, a secret friend, contrives their escape to the mountains, and eleven of the men do escape, but Abram refuses to flee, and remains behind. At the end of the seven days, the "people of the land" demand that the imprisoned men shall be produced. Jectan explains that eleven of them "have broken prison and fled by night," but Abram is produced, is cast into the fire, but is miraculously delivered by God,¹ who causes an earthquake which breaks up the furnace and scatters the fire, which “consumed all them that stood round about in the sight of the furnace; and all they that were burned in that day were 83,500. But upon Abram was there not any the least hurt by the burning of the fire.”

It is obvious from what has been adduced that the legend assumed different forms. The narrative just cited is quite independent of the rest, except for the episode of the fiery furnace. The form also given in our Book is largely independent. Nowhere else do we meet with the details about the idol-gods Merumath and Barisat. The fiery furnace also is absent, and the burning of the idols is effected by fire from heaven. At the same time in chap. vii. of our Book in the speech of Abraham to Terah about the claims to divinity of fire, water, earth, sun, moon, and stars, there is a marked parallelism with the Rabbinical accounts. It is clear that the form of the legend in our Book is due to an independent and free handling of the legendary material, many new features having been introduced in the process.

The legend also occurs in various forms in the Patristic and Mohammedan literature. For the former cf. Clem. Recognitions, i. 32 f., Augustine, De Civitate xvi. 15; and for the latter cf. J.E., i. 87 f. (“Abraham in Mohammedan Legend”). See further Fabricius, Codex pseudepigraphus Vet. Test. (2nd ed., Hamburg, 1722, pp. 335-428), Bonwetsch, pp. 41-55. The later Jewish forms of the legend (as preserved in late Midrashim) have been collected and translated into German by Wünsche, Aus Israels Lehrhallen (1907), i. pp. 14-48 (the original Hebrew texts are printed mainly in Jellinek’s Beth ha-Midrash); cf. also G. Friedlander, Rabbinic Philosophy and Ethics (1912), pp. 47 ff.

APPENDIX II²

All the Palæas begin the story of Abraham as follows:

“But Terah begat Abraham:” and Terah began to do the same work which he saw (being done) in the case of his father Nahor, and worshipped the gods, and offered sacrifices before them, calves, and heifers, and performed everything well-pleasing to the Devil. When Abraham, however, had seen this, and on account of it fell into much reflexion, he said within himself: “These gods are wood, through which my father Terah is deceived, and these gods have no soul in themselves; and possessing eyes they see not, and having ears they hear not, and possessing hands they handle not, and having feet they go not, and possessing noses they smell not, and there is no voice in their mouth. Therefore I am of opinion that in truth my father Terah is deceived. But Abraham having thought thus. . . .

Then some of the MSS. proceed:

Abraham (or I.), however, one day planed the gods, etc. (as in chap. i.); but the rest continue with chap. vii.: [Having thought thus, Abraham] came to his father, etc.

APPENDIX III³

A portion of our Apocalypse is contained in an abbreviated form in the Kukulevic MS. which is described by V. Jagic in his Contributions to the History of the Literature of the Croat and Serbian People (Prilozi k historji knjizevnosti naroda hrvatskoga i srbskoga), Agram 1868.

¹ According to R. Eliezer b. Jacob it was Michael who delivered Abraham from the fire; but the prevailing view was that it was God Himself; cf. Bereshith rabba xlv. 16.

² See Bonwetsch, p. 9.

³ See Bonwetsch, pp. 9-11.

The MS. dates from the year 1520, and includes on pp. 37^v foll. parts of The Apocalypse of Abraham, in a much abbreviated, dislocated and altered form as compared with the tradition represented by the Russian MSS. This apparently represents an independent South Slavonic Recension of our Book. It runs as follows:¹

A word of righteous Abraham, as God loved Abraham. He was born; in sixty years [i. e. at the age of 60] He [God] had given him (Terah) a son, (even to Terah) who believed in the idols, and manufactured idols, and gave them names. Abraham went and sold the idols. When on a certain day Abraham had lain down in the field, and saw the stars of heaven and everything (made) by God, he surveyed it all in his heart, and said: "O great marvel! These idols have not made it: heaven and earth and everything hath God made, we, however, are senseless men not believing in the Creator of heaven and earth, but we believe in stones and wood, and in vain things, but I see and understand that God is great, who hath created heaven and earth and the whole world."

On a certain day his father carved idols, and told Abraham to prepare (their) food. And Abraham took a god and stood him at the fire behind the pot, and said to him: If thou art a god, pay heed to the pot and to thyself. And then the pot boiled over, and burnt the god's head. And Abraham approached, and saw it, and laughed about it much, and said to his father: "Father, these idols are no good, they cannot protect themselves, how should they protect us?" And his father was angry, and said: "Ills have befallen us, my son, I am not offended." And then Abraham arose and took the idols, and loaded them on an ass, and brought them into the street to sell. And he saw a great marsh, and said to the idols: "If you are gods, take heed to the ass that it do not drown you." And the ass went into the marsh and sank in the mire. And Abraham said to them: "If you were good gods, (then) you would protect . . . and also protect yourselves; but since you are evil gods, you must suffer evil." And he took them and shattered them.

And he returned to his father, and said: "Father, I tell thee the truth; these gods are no good, and you are wrong to believe in them." Thereupon his father flung a knife against him, and Abraham stood aside, and was perplexed in his mind. And he went into the land of Mesopotamia Chaldaea and did not know the way by which to go. Then the angel Uriel came to him, having made himself (in appearance) like a traveller. And Abraham said to the angel: "Tell me, Brother, whence art thou, and whither goest thou?" The angel said to him: "I go to the land of Chaldaea." And Abraham said: "I also go with thee." And the angel said to him: "Come, Brother!" And Abraham saw a large (and) very black eagle sitting and nodding its head at Abraham; and Abraham passing by it was seized with great fear, and said nothing.

And the angel said to him: "Talk, Brother, of nothing but God." And the angel taught him all the time to talk of nothing but godly things. And the angel said to him: "Yonder eagle was indeed the Devil himself, and desired to make thee turn back."

And in that land Abraham abode fifteen years; there he dwelt, (and) thither his father came to him, and his brother Lot, and there Abraham took his wife Sarah.

And the angel came to Abraham, and told him to depart from this land, and to go into the land of Chaldaea (sic), "for there the Lord hath commanded thee to live." Abraham did accordingly. The narrative then proceeds on the basis of the account given in Gen. xx.

It is obvious that this is largely an independent reshaping of the old material. But it contains clear reminiscences both of the legendary and apocalyptic parts of our Book.
